PONTIFF FLAYS REDS IN LABOR CONCORD PLEA

Speech, Broadcast in 3 Tongues, Urges Reform in Wealth Spread.

10,000, BAREHEADED, LISTEN TO ADDRESS

New Charter Will Be Issued Next Week; U. S. Hears Pope Plainly.

Vatican City, May 15 (A.P.).—Pope Pius XI promised the Catholic world a new charter of labor to elevate the workman's status in a radio address today commemorating the fortieth anniversary of Pope Leo XIII's labor encyclical, "Rerum Novarum."

This new charter will be issued in the form of a long encyclical entitled "Quadragesimo Anno" and will be published in about a week.

Broadcasting for the first time in the modern tongues of Italian, French and German successively, the pontiff said the economic world must be reorganized to achieve justice for the working man and laid great stress on three words which he said would express the meaning of the entire document—"prayer, action, sacrifice."

Address to 10,000 Workers.

From the papal throne and under a great canopy in the courtyard of San Damaso, the Pope addressed directly 10,000 Catholic workers, who stood bareheaded in a scene which was brilliant with the banners of many nations, the colors of papal uniforms and the somberness of ecclesiastical garb. He made the longest address since he was elected nine years ago, lasting an hour and twenty minutes.

The church's new labor charter, which the pontiff had forecast, was outlined in a short encyclical letter published today and was distributed to the pilgrims before his address. It was later read on the radio by Mgr. Francis J. Spellman, of Whitman, Mass.

In it the Pope condemned extremists and said socialism and communism were incompatible with the church's principles.

Pleads for Better Relations.

He said there must be an overhauling of the economic system by "bringing it back to the requirements of social justice so as to insure more equitable distribution of the united proceeds of capital and labor."

The disordered world today, the pontiff said, was due to men fixing their eyes on earthly goods without heed of God and of things eternal.

The Pope asserted his own and the church's right to intervene in social problems such as are at issue in a world where there is too great injustice in the apportionment of the world's goods.

He pleaded for better relations between classes and the trade groups and declared that the workers' wages must be adequate to meet all the proper needs of the workingman and his family.

In a word, he added, the only real remedy is a return to the sane principles of Christian social philosophy.

Crowd Gathers Early.

Long before the Pope was to make his address, St. Peter's Square and the avenues leading to San Damaso courtyard within the Vatican were filled with thousands of pilgrims bearily gayly colored flags.

The crowd began to be admitted into the courtyard shortly after 4 o'clock, approaching within a short distance of a high platform hung with red velvet and damask from which the Pope spoke. It was a brilliant day and the sun was out in full, although the courtyard was in a warm shade.

The pontiff began speaking at 5:28 p. m. (11:28 a. m. Eastern standard time). He prefaced his address with a few words in Italian, greeting the workers who had come from all over the world to attend the anniversary. He then repeated the greeting in French and German and launched into the main body of his address.

Speaks in Three Languages.

He spoke each of the three languages with equal facility and divided his talk into three sections, repeating each in the three languages.

Americans who were present included Bishop Edwin V. O'Hara, of Great Falls, Mont., who sat in front; Father Fortier, of Fordham University; Father Husslein, Mgrs. Kily and Brealin, of the American College in Rome; John J. Raskob and his daughter, Elizabeth, and Dr. Raymond Sullivan, of New York.

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—The voice of Pope Pius XI was heard clearly throughout America and most of the world again today in his second address via radio from station HVJ, Vatican City.

Reception was equally as good as on the occasion of his first talk, Feb-

Exceeding in brilliancy the opening session on Thursday of the first annual bridge tournament of Washington players, sponsored by The Washington Post, last night's events also surpassed in point of numbers anything that ever before attempted in bridge tournaments in this or any other country.

According to R. E. Needham, manager of the tournament, who has conducted many similar events in different parts of the country, there was never before gathered together in a championship match so many contract bridge players as assembled in the handsomely appointed parlors and ballroom of the New Shoreham Hotel, last night.

So large was the gathering that the spacious new ballroom where the opening session was held was found inadequate to accommodate all of the players and it was necessary for Manager Moore, himself a participant, to assign another parlor for the use of the overflow players. Two sections were set up in the second parlor and Mrs. Nancy Munce, of Richmond, a professional player who came to

Snowden May Sit In House of Lords

London Hears Chancellor May Quit Finance Post and Be Made Peer.

London, Saturday, May 16 (A.P.).—The Daily Express says Philip Snowden is contemplating an early resignation as chancellor of the exchequer, owing to illness, and may be created a peer.

The paper says Snowden's illness is so serious he is unlikely to be able to continue his duties as chancellor and he himself has been the first to realize this.

The government, however, is loath to lose his services and it is understood Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, with a view of easing Snowden's political burdens, will recommend the peerage.

Snowden's political views, the paper adds, are such that under ordinary circumstances he would not be likely to consent to enter the upper house, but the laborites are desirous of increasing their representation in the House of Lords.

BIG 4 STUDY LEAGUE TRADE PACT ACTION

Foreign Ministers Discuss Best Way to Deal With Customs Union.

Geneva, May 15 (A.P.).—The foreign ministers of four great powers devoted a long secret session this afternoon and evening to seeking agreement on a method for dealing with the proposed Austro-German customs union in the commission for study of European federation, now in session here, and the League of Nations council, beginning next Monday.

The big four are Arthur Henderson, of Great Britain; Aristide Briand, of France; Julius Curtius, of Germany, and Dino Grandi, of Italy. They are trying to bring some semblance of order out of the chaos into which the European diplomatic situation was thrown by the recent announcements of Berlin and Vienna of their scheme for an economic "anschluss" and the subsequent protests of Paris and Prague.

Meanwhile Maxim Litvinoff, Moscow's commissar for foreign affairs and tireless critic of the league, arrived at the head of the Soviet's delegation. He will join the twenty other European foreign ministers participating here in the league's commission for studying European collaboration.

In a brief sitting today this commission cleared the way for a concerted attack tomorrow on Europe's economic problems, in which the big factors appeared to be tariffs, unemployment, stagnant trade, ailing industry and agriculture and timid finance.

The conclusions of the big four on the Austro-German "Anschluss" were

RHEEM'S CREDITORS MAY ORGANIZE POOL

Holders of Hay-Adams House Notes Move to Form New Corporation.

Holders of notes on the Hay-Adams House, one of the many exclusive apartment properties financed by the defunct Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co., last night moved tentatively to pool their securities in a new corporation, in a maneuver to save themselves from being completely wiped out by the recent mortgage house failure.

About 300 noteholders, representing approximately $400,000 of notes secured by deeds of trust on the Hay-Adams leasehold, voted to empower Walter B. Guy, local attorney, with authority to organize the new corporation under Deleware laws.

The condition was attached that

Plans for Night Air 'Raid' Canceled After Criticism

Gen. MacArthur Explains, However, That Strain of New York Maneuvers Would Be Too Great on Fliers; Other Show Details Unchanged.

(United Press.)

On the eve of the Army Air Corps' mammoth military maneuvers, the War Department last night announced abandonment of its much publicized night "raid" of bombers on New York City, scheduled for next Friday.

As a result, 36 great bombers will not thunder over the city's theatrical district at 11 p. m., simulating an attack, nor release brilliant flares over the Hudson and East Rivers. The maneuvers over New York will be confined to a day flight over the city on Saturday.

Orders cancelling the maneuvers were issued by the chief of staff of the Army, Gen. Douglas MacArthur—who said he assumed complete responsibility for the change—to Brig. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, who is now at Dayton, Ohio, directing the concentration of the Army's first air division.

Another War Department spokesman said it might be assumed that the orders were issued with Secretary of War Patrick Hurley's knowledge and acquiescence.

Asked for reasons, Gen. MacArthur said that he had decided, after consultation with Maj. Gen. James E. Fechet, chief of the Air Corps, that the strain of having men fly both

50,000 TO SEE DERBY TODAY; 15 NOMINATED

Twenty Grand Rules as Favorite, With Mate Second Choice.

FIVE MAY NOT START; TRACK TO BE FAST

Equipoise's Form Doubtful; Vice President Among Throng at Classic.

Louisville, Ky., May 15 (U.P.).—The spell of the Kentucky Derby, America's most picturesque horse race, held this old Southern city, famed in song and story, in its grip tonight.

For tomorrow about 5 p. m., Central standard time, the running of the derby, first run in 1875, will take place before a throng expected to exceed 50,000.

And it will be run in fair weather and over a fast track for the first time in five years, unless all predictions of the Weather Bureau are turned topsy-turvey. There hasn't been a dry track and sunshine for a derby since 1926, when Bubbling Over triumphed.

Fifteen thoroughbreds, out of an original field of 130 nominations, have been named for this mile and a quarter struggle for turf glory and a $50,000 added purse.

Greentree Entry Choice.

The Greentree Stable's entry of Twenty Grand, Surf Board and Anchors Aweigh, probably will go to the post favored at odds of 8-5. Twenty Grand will carry most of the crowd's money on his white-spotted nose, as Surf Board is in the race to set the early pace and Anchors Aweigh probably will be scratched unless the track is heavy.

Mate, owned by A. C. Bostwick, 30-year-old New York millionaire, probably will be second choice at odds of 5 to 2.

When Mate and Twenty Grand met in the Preakness, Bostwick's colt won by a length and a half in a mile and three-sixteenths.

Twenty Grand will be out to turn the tables on his Preakness conqueror and four out of every five horsemen down here believe that if the race is between these two horses, Mrs. Payne Whitney's colt will triumph.

Three May Be Scratched.

Of the fifteen horses named, at least three—Up, Don Leon and one of the Greentree entries—probably will be scratched, reducing the field to twelve, the smallest since the 1922 Derby, won by Morvich, when only ten started. It is possible that a couple of others, the Mongol and Prince d'Amour, also will be scratched, which would reduce the starters to ten.

Radiant in the brilliant sunshine, the course at Churchill Downs today was a striking picture. The broad expanse of green grass in the infield, dotted with blooming lilacs, is encircled by a brown strip of track over which the hoofbeats of America's greatest 3-year-olds will echo for just two minutes and a few seconds, tomorrow.

Then some stout-hearted thoroughbred will take his place alongside of Gallant Fox, Bubbling Over, Zev, Exterminator, Old Rosebud and other stalwarts as the winner of this great test of horse flesh and heart.

Trainer Fred Hopkins disclosed for the first time that Equipoise, until

Swindle Claim Bares Wales Among Victims

Former Chicago Barber, Sought in Alleged Fleecing of British Firm for $2,250,000, Said to Have Cheated England's Heir.

Chicago, Ill., May 15 (A.P.).—A barber who laid down his shears to take up promoting and conjure up a flow of millions was stalked today by Department of Justice agents who held warrants charging him with defrauding a British firm of $2,250,000.

"Jake the Barber" Factor, whose variegated career, as described by the agents, included a chemin de fer session in France at which he was the banker and the Prince of Wales the losing player, was sought on complaint of the British government.

Coupled with him in the charge was a Harry Green, erstwhile resident of a Gold Coast apartment which, the agents said, he fled in company with Factor just as they were to be seized.

And in New York a third party to the alleged swindle—Harry Kline—was reported to be under arrest on secret warrants.

Details trickled slowly out today. Godfrey Haggard, British consul general, in Chicago, declined to talk, but it was learned he signed the complaints.

It was learned further that the firm allegedly swindled was the Broad Street Press, Ltd., but in what manner remained undisclosed.

Factor and his confederates were charged, it was reported, with having obtained £85,000 between July 14 and August 16, 1930; £131,000 between October 3 and 27, 1930, and £242,500 between June 14 and September 30, 1930.

Once Factor was a barber in a North Clark street shop. He forsook that calling and in 1925 was named in Federal warrants on a charge, later dismissed, of using the mails to defraud.

It was alleged at that time that "Jake the Barber" had sold $1,000,000 or more of Florida lands around Orlando, at the height of the boom. Customers complained much of the land was deep beneath Orlando's lakes.

He departed for Europe, and was next heard of in September, 1930, at Le Toquet, France. The Prince of Wales, trying his hand at chemin de fer, found it impossible to win in a game Factor banked.

At that time, reports from England said he was being sought for having sold oilless oil lands in Arkansas, Wyoming and Montana to Englishmen.

An attache at the consulate here said the men are accompanied by a woman believed to be Mrs. Factor.

He added that the case had been developing for three weeks. An attorney in New York, acting for Great Britain, procured warrants there, but before they could be served, the men had left. Proceedings in Chicago were held secret until today.

Burning Plane's Pilot Lands, Saves 21 Lives

Washington to New York Craft Brought Down at Aberdeen, Md., When Fire Is Discovered; Passengers, Including Woman, Calm.

A flaming Eastern Air Transport plane, bearing 21 persons en route from Washington to New York, was brought to a safe landing yesterday afternoon in a small field at Edgewood Arsenal, near Aberdeen, Md.

To the imperturbable nerve of the pilot, A. C. Komdat, and the panic-averting chatter of an unruffled hostess, Miss Elizabeth Westwood, was attributed the escape from tragedy.

Prominent among the eighteen passengers was J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Bureau of Investigation, Department of Justice, who continued, with six fellow passengers, in another plane to Newark.

The plane was flying at an altitude of 1,500 feet and a speed of 120 miles an hour when flames appeared on the outside of the fuselage and smoke filled the cabin.

Komdat directed his assistant, G. J. McDonald, to fight the fire with an extinguisher while he nosed the ship down in a forced landing. The passengers were reassured that the ship would land safely and they remained calmly in their chairs.

The plane made a smooth landing, rolling to a stop on a field near the arsenal as the assistant pilot continued to combat the flames with the extinguisher.

"We noticed the flames 15 minutes after we left Baltimore," declared Mr. Hoover on reaching Newark. "A wise-cracking girl hostess, Miss Elizabeth Westwood, first noticed the flames in the second compartment, a smoking room. She walked to the front of the ship, notified the pilot and then McDonald seized a fire extinguisher and the pilot started earthward. The girl's wise-cracking

BISHOP CANNON HITS SMITH AND RASKOB

Effort to Have Democrats Oppose Prohibition Is Assailed.

A sharp protest was hurled by Bishop James Cannon, jr., last night against what he termed the effort of former Gov. Alfred E. Smith and Chairman John J. Raskob of the Democratic party to have the party take a definite stand against prohibition.

Bishop Cannon made his assault as a guest at an informal dinner given at the Mayflower Hotel as a feature of the Methodist Protestant Church Convention, which was concluded later at Memorial Continental Hall.

He charged that the efforts of Mr. Smith and Mr. Raskob should be undertaken "not as Democrats, but as open advocates of the manufacture and sale of intoxicants."

"The eighteenth amendment was not proposed, supported or adopted as a partisan political measure," he said. "Why should it now be insisted that the Democratic party indorse this proposed Smith-Raskob amendment?"

He referred to Mr. Raskob's proposal of an amendment giving the States authority to determine whether liquor should be manufactured and sold within their borders.

"The issue is clear cut," he continued. "The people of the United States have as a Nation put the brand of the criminal upon the traffic in intoxicants for beverage purposes in every State and Territory under the flag. The Smith-Raskob amendment definitely proposes to remove that criminal brand and to make the traffic lawful in some States, with all the resultant evils to the Nation which would follow such action.

"Will the United States remove the brand of the criminal which has been stamped upon the liquor traffic? That is the only single question today."

The concluding session of the four-day gathering was marked by presentation of a report by its committee on findings, headed by Dr. A. N. Ward, president of Western Maryland College, deploring a glaring lack of leadership in "this disturbed economic situation." The committee, described as reflecting the opinion of the denomination, is composed of 40 of the church's prominent leaders.

"We have become too much concerned with theology and too little concerned with religion, and in our effort to coordinate all religions it

BISHOPS ARE NAMED IN SLANDER ACTION

Georgia Minister Bases His Suits for $25,000 on Political Fight.

Dallas, Tex., May 15 (A.P.).—Bishop John M. Moore, of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, has been sued for $25,000 by the Rev. Rembert G. Smith, Methodist minister at Sparta, Ga., who charges slander in connection with a political controversy which raged at a general church conference here last year.

The suit, filed Monday in Federal court here, is based on statements assertedly made by Bishop Moore, whose residence is in Dallas.

The Rev. Mr. Smith was active in preferring accusations against Bishop Moore, Bishop James Cannon, jr., Bishop E. D. Mouzon and Bishop H. M. DuBose, claiming they had been unwarrantedly interested in opposing Alfred E. Smith's candidacy for the Presidency.

Statements said to have been made by Bishop Moore and afterward carried in newspapers criticizing the

H.H. Bundy Named Castle's Successor

New Assistant Secretary of State Is Attorney From Boston.

(Associated Press.)

Harvey H. Bundy, a Boston lawyer, was appointed Assistant Secretary of State yesterday to succeed William R. Castle, jr., who was promoted to Undersecretary.

The appointment was announced by President Hoover. Castle recently succeeded the late Joseph P. Cotton, who died after an eye operation performed at Baltimore.

Bundy was born in Grand Rapids, Mich., March 30, 1888, and graduated from Yale in 1909. He was graduated from the Harvard law school in 1914, and for a year thereafter was secretary to Justice Holmes of the Supreme Court. For two years during the war he served as assistant counsel of the United States Food Administration, of which President Hoover was the head, and from 1919 to 1925 was secretary of the United States Sugar Equalization Board, Inc.

New Farm Board Row Seen With Grape Loan Request

Application for $14,000,000 Aid Is Expected Next Week; Tydings Threatens That Matter Will Be Taken to Senate Again.

(United Press.)

Another prohibition controversy is scheduled to be laid on the doorstep of the Federal Farm Board next week when the California grape industry is expected to apply for a loan with which to finance the 1931 crop.

Those seeking the loan, according to informal representations made to the board, will include Fruit Industries, Ltd., which markets a grape juice product which, it has been asserted, may turn into wine after purchase unless the buyer takes extraordinary precautions against such a contingency. Fruit Industries, Ltd., is the company represented as counsel by Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, former Assistant Attorney General and dry crusader in the presidential campaign of 1928.

Senator Millard Tydings (Democrat), Maryland, antiprohibitionist, is keeping a watchful eye on the Farm Board's activities relating to the grape industry and said yesterday if another loan is made he will bring the issue before the Senate again next session.

"We ought to decide whether this is to be a prohibition country or not, Tydings said. "At least the Government ought to take a consistent posi-

BREAK IN RELATIONS FEARED AS PENALTY

Four Killed and 10 Wounded in Religious Disorders at Granada.

Madrid, May 15 (A.P.).—Minister of Justice Fernando de los Rios, under whose cabinet portfolio comes the study of the question of church and state, said tonight it is the government's intention to see the church separated from the state.

"Immediate steps will be taken by the newly appointed juridical advisory board to draw up a basis for separation of church and state," he declared.

"Naturally our provisional government will not be unanimous on the separation question, since it is constituted by men of different ideology and political views. But when the basis is completed it will be put before the constituent assembly, after it is convoked, for a decision.

"The assembly will debate it dispassionately and then decide the issue definitely.

Opposition Is Seen.

"I know that I am the target of criticism from both the right and left elements. Some of the right elements contrary to others, criticize me because they will not understand that the church will be much better off if separated since it is today spiritually impoverished because it is dependent upon the State.

"If it is left to the faithful for support it would have greater freedom of spirit.

"As to the left elements, they attack me because they believe I am too lenient.

Answer to Pope Planned.

Provisional President Alcala Zamora meditated tonight upon a serious communication from Papal Nuncio Federico Tedeschini, which was generally believed to be a grave protest from the Vatican concerning the recent anti-Catholic depredations.

Following upon dispatches from Vatican City to the effect that he had been instructed to file formal representations, the papal nuncio called on President Alcala, and was closeted with him for more than an hour. Although both declined to comment, it was believed in some quarters the Pope's representative had presented the alternative of an adequate apology or the severance of relations between the republic and Vatican City.

It was not thought, however, the Pontiff would invoke excommunication or declare the cessation of spiritual ministrations to the Spanish church, because the government has condemned the attacks in which scores of religious buildings were burned and their occupants routed.

Situation Gives Concern.

The situation is not considered hopeful from any aspect, and all Spain anxiously awaits details of today's conference.

Meanwhile, the panic of monks, nuns and priests seems to have subsided in some parts of the nation. Some schools and convents are reopening and some of their occupants are returning. Thousands, however, continue in hiding and church treasures to the value of millions of pesetas still are secreted in private homes to which they were removed to save them from the mobs.

Madrid and most of the provinces were tranquil in observance of the name day of San Isidro, patron saint of the capital. Martial law still was in effect, but apparently there was little need for armed force.

An outbreak occurred in the town of Ronda Capuchinos, where a small party raced through the streets in an automobile firing pistols. Several Communists were arrested, and the disturbance was quickly suppressed.

King's Property Sought.

Meanwhile, authorities were searching records to determine whether former King Alfonso owned other property in addition to his two personal palaces at Santander and San Sebastian, already seized, and various personal objects still in the national palaces at Madrid, Seville, Aranjuez and Barcelona.

The government was investigating reports that the former monarch controlled large blocks of stock in the Madrid subway, a telephone company, a linoleum factory in Madrid, as well as holdings in steel and automobile plants. It is planned to seize and hold all of Alfonso's property in Spain pending disposition of it by the new national assembly.

Papal Nuncio Tedeschini tonight confirmed that "negotiations" are going on between Vatican City and the Spanish government following upon the antichurch disorders, but said he was unable to divulge their nature. He added, however, he had received special orders from Vatican City.

Many Reds Arrested.

Seville, Spain, May 15 (A.P.).—Police today arrested many alleged Communists and other left agitators under suspicion that they participated in recent attacks on churches and convents. The looting continued throughout Andalusia. Authorities intend to try those accused of burning the church property at summary court-martials.

Military headquarters announced that those responsible for spreading false and alarming reports will be severely punished. Soldiers received orders to shoot on sight anybody attempting new burning or looting.

Seville Communists, in a statement today, declared they were being unjustly persecuted and were not responsible for recent disorders. It was claimed the bourgeois class was trying to make the Communists "the goat," and to make the lefts seem enemies of the church and religion for the purpose of weakening the labor movement and preventing workers from securing their rights. The Communists added that despite the closing of their meeting places and arrest of their members, they will continue working clandestinely to improve conditions of the masses.

Four Killed in Riots.

Granada, Spain, May 15 (A.P.).—Four persons were killed and ten injured in antichurch disorders in the nearby town of Atarfe. Inhabitants at Atarfe, hearing that rioters were coming there to burn their church after having attempted to destroy a convent at Santa Fe, assembled at the edge of the town to protect their property.

As the rioters' car entered Atarfe the occupants were met with a rain of bullets from the guns of the defendants. The rioters raced their car through the crowd and fired guns, causing the fourteen casualties.

Three of those killed were residents of the town and the fourth was the driver of the automobile which crashed into a wall. Several of the other occupants were injured.

Those in the car maintained they had not attacked the Santa Fe Convent and added that they took the inhabitants at Atarfe for Communists when they started shooting. Authorities were skeptical of this explanation and are investigating.

This was believed to have been the first fatal antichurch demonstration since Tuesday night, when four persons were killed at Cordova.

The military governor at Granada dispatched troops and civil guards to Atarfe and Santa Fe. It is understood here that the convent at Santa Fe was damaged, but not destroyed in the attack.

Tonight's outbreaks caused great public indignation throughout the Granada region. In many places the population was reported to have armed itself and to be ready to repel any rioters.

TEXAS BISHOP SUED ON SLANDER CHARGE

Rev. Mr. Smith's attitude led to filing of the suit.

Court attaches said Bishop Moore was served with a notice of the suit Tuesday. Bishop Moore said tonight that he had not authorized newspaper quotations of any remarks he might have made concerning the Rev. Smith.

Charlotte, N. C., May 15 (A.P.).—Filing of a petition in a suit asking $50,000 for alleged slander and libel from Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, of the Southern Methodist Church, by the Rev. Rembert G. Smith, Methodist minister of Sparta, Ga., was disclosed here tonight.

The petition asks $25,000 for the alleged slander and the same amount on the libel count.

It was explained at the office of the clerk of the United States Court for the Western District that Bishop Mouzon had not been served in the suit because of the failure of the plaintiff to post the $200 bond required in such cases.

In his petition, Mr. Smith alleges ous and defamatory" remarks about that Bishop Mouzon made "slanderhim after the Georgia minister had preferred charges before the general conference of the church in 1928 of "unwarranted political activities" in the presidential campaign of that year against Bishops James Cannon, jr., and John M. Moore and H. M. Dubose.

Bishop Mouzon was on his way to Abilene, Tex., tonight.

Committee Named For Traffic Study

Whitehurst Heads Group to Help Draw Regulations Under New Law.

A coordinating committee to aid in drafting traffic regulations under the new traffic law, which goes into effect July 1, was appointed yesterday by the District Commissioners. The organization was proposed in the traffic advisory council report following the McClintock survey last year.

Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, chief highway engineer, is chairman of the committee. Other members are Traffic Director W. H. Harland; Capt. R. C. Montgomery, superintendent of United States park police; E. W. Brown, assistant superintendent of police in charge of the Traffic Bureau; E. V. Fisher, executive secretary of the Public Utilities Commission, and E. W. Thomas, assistant corporation counsel.

The body will function continuously, Maj. Gen. Herbert B. Crosby, police commissioner, said yesterday. Besides preparing rules to become effective at the beginning of the new fiscal year, the committee will cooperate with the traffic director after the new system goes into effect.

Firemen Extinguish Awning Fire.

Fire engines were called last night to extinguish an awning fire on the ninth floor of the National Press Building. The fire was outside the window of the Harnischfeger Sales Co. in an office occupied by D. J. Murphy.

FRENCH TRY AGAIN FOR ITALIAN PACT

New Proposal Supplies Basis for More Negotiations on Navy Cut.

Paris, May 15 (U.P.).—Another "final effort" to prevent complete collapse of Franco-Italian negotiations for a naval limitations accord was made today when the government submitted a new memorandum to Rome and London.

The memorandum, prepared in great secrecy by Minister of Navy Charles Dumont, was a twelve-page document and was sent through the Quai d'Orsay to the capitals of Italy and Britain, where naval experts have started study of it.

It was believed in France that consideration of the new memorandum by Italy and Britain would require perhaps a week and might prevent discussion of the proposals by the foreign ministers of the three countries who are now at Geneva. Aristide Briand, Arthur Henderson and Dino Grandi were scheduled to discuss the naval deadlock at Geneva.

Basis for New Parley Given.

The new memorandum provides a basis for new negotiations, it was said reliably, although the actual proposals were not believed to be new. It gives an objective expose of the difficulties which caused the present deadlock in negotiations for final drafting of the accord at London.

Furthermore, the memorandum explains a means whereby it may be possible to settle the question of replacement of 66,000 tons of warships, as demanded by France, without a breakdown of the entire scheme for an accord between France and Italy, with Britain participating.

Official quarters said the memorandum probably would be "a final gesture" and, if it fails, it would mean that the hopes for an accord definitely have passed for the present.

Rejection Not Expected.

It was said, however, that the government is convinced that the British and Italian experts will not reject this new offer if they are earnestly anxious for success of the negotiations.

The Franco-Italian naval negotiations grew out of the London conference treaty, limiting the navies of Britain, the United States and Japan. France and Italy could not agree, but in March finally came to an accord with the aid of Britain. The experts went to London to draft the accord when difficulties arose over France's demands that she be allowed to replace 66,000 tons of ships which will become obsolete before 1936.

Subsequent negotiations have failed to clear up the disagreement.

ACTION ON CUSTOMS UNION DISCUSSED

not made public tonight. It was understood, however, Dr. Curtius was pressing the German claim that the proposed customs agreement is part of a movement for multilateral agreements for reducing tariff barriers and a good example which France and others ought to follow gladly.

M. Briand is known to have brought to Geneva counter proposals which it was believed tonight he would present to the foreign ministers assembled here. These proposals look toward close European collaboration to solve common problems in agriculture, industry and finance.

Briand's Plan Is Awaited.

Between their French and German colleagues the British and Italian foreign ministers occupied the position of conciliators. It was believed a probable solution would be reference of the economic questions involved in the "Anschluss" to a subcommittee of the present European commission and its legal aspects to the permanent court at The Hague.

The uncertain position of M. Briand, chairman of the commission, the result of his defeat for the presidency of France, continued of paramount interest in Geneva today. The circulation of Briand's own plan for a European economic concert was awaited with keen anticipation, while the foreign ministers applauded enthusiastically a tribute by Mr. Henderson to his Frence colleague.

There was a disposition in some quarters to charge Mr. Henderson with impropriety for his remarks on M. Briand's fate in the battle of French politics.

Henderson Honors Briand.

It was feared in some quarters that nationalistic sentiment in France would be offended by the British foreign minister's speech before the European commission, the essential passage of which follows:

"During the past few days a great event has taken place in the national life of the country which our chairman represents. I am certain that no one here would desire even remotely to interfere with the course of national politics, but it is almost superfluous for me to say in a gathering of this description that our chairman is not only a national politician—he is a great international statesman.

"In view of what has taken place, it would be idle for us to pretend to each other that the position of M. Briand remains exactly the same as it was. * * * We can not but expect that before very long some changes may take place, which, if we had the power to decide, would not take place."

Portuguese Aid Is in Charge.

Mr. Augusto Mendes Leal, first secretary of the Portuguese Legation, is charge d'affaires at the legation in the absence of Viscount d'Alte, minister plenipotentiary, who is in Portugal on a vacation with Viscountess d'Alte. The minister will return in July.

Resume of Pope's Labor Encyclical, With Address Broadcast to World

Vatican City, May 15 (A.P.).—Mgr. Francis J. Spellman, of Whitman, Mass., who spoke on the radio after Pope Pius today, gave the following resume of the encyclical on labor which is shortly to be issued by the pontiff:

Our holy father, Pope Pius XI, in his discourse said that, inheriting from his great predecessor, Pope Leo XIII, a special fatherly interest in the welfare of the laboring classes, he was not content with a simple commemoration of the fortieth anniversary of the publication of Pope Leo's encyclical rerum novarum.

He decided to make observance of this anniversary the occasion of the announcement of the proximate publication of a new encyclical on this subject. In this new papal document his holiness will explain to the members of the church and will indicate to the world at large an ample program which still remains to be accomplished before the courageous and splendid initiatives of Pope Leo XIII can be said to have completely attained their fruition.

In anticipation of the publication of this new encyclical, the holy father has given an outline of its contents to those of his children who from all parts of the world have come to Rome in pilgrimage on this occasion to gather together in the home of the father of all the faithful which is also their home; for the father's home is always the home of his children.

Represent Capital, Labor.

These pilgrims are representatives of both laborers and of the captains of industry and by their presence they indicate the gratitude of both laborers and employers to the vicar of Christ for enunciation of those principles, the observance of which will insure the welfare of all.

The encyclical takes its title 'quadregesimo anno,' which means in the fortieth year, from its first two words that appropriately indicate the anniversary which occasions its publication. The encyclical commences by recalling the necessity and opportuneness of the encyclical rerum novarum, which means 'of new things' 40 year ago. This necessity and this appropriateness are clearly evidenced by the universal acclaim which greeted the encyclical at the time of its publication and by the consideration in which it has been continuously and deservedly held and is still held, being universally regarded as a providential document constituting a blessing bestowed by God not only upon His church, but upon all mankind.

The new encyclical quadragestimo anno, in the fortieth year, will develop three points. The holy father says that in the first place the new encyclical will enumerate the foremost among the many intestimable benefits which have resulted from the encyclical rerum novarum. These are, for example, the establishment of a solid foundation and the imparting of an efficacious impulse to the development of sociology and economics according to Catholic principles; promoting of an even more thorough and profound instruction and the formation of workingmen in religious, moral and social subjects, thus rendering them more conscious of their dignity as men and as Christians, fitting them to safeguard the moral and economic interests of their classes with the knowledge and competence and prudence thus becoming, in such movements, the leaders of their fellows.

Other Examples Mentioned.

Other examples of the beneficent results of the publication of the encyclical rerum novarum were the gradual substitution of a new social policy more favorable to justice in place of the formerly supreme liberalism and the resolute and firm asserting of the right possessed even by workingmen to form associations for mutual aid and legitimate defense of their common interests, a right which liberalism was endeavoring to impede by an unjust abuse of power.

In actual fact numerous associations, either of laboring men by themselves or of tradesmen, farmers or similar workers, grew up on all sides. These associations, by putting into practice in so far as circumstances permitted the principles laid down by Leo XIII and confirmed by his successors, have merited well and still merit well of civilization and true social prosperity.

With good reason, therefore, the holy father ends the first part of his encyclical by affirming that the experience of the past 40 years forces the conclusion that "rerum novarum" is the Magna Charta of all Catholic activity in the social sphere.

Conditions of Today.

In the second part, his holiness goes on to examine the points which lend themselves most to discussion or about which in view of the changed conditions of modern times, he deems it particularly necessary to speak in clear and authoritative language.

First, the encyclical vindicates once more, as Leo XIII had done, the full right and even the soleman duty of the church and of its head to intervene in social problems, not indeed in technical matters nor for temporal ends, but insofar as these problems fall under the moral and evangelical law.

It then reaffirms the Catholic doctrine, set forth by Leo XIII, concerning the right of property and its double character, individual and social, denouncing egotistical individualism and collectivism as equally pernicious errors, and stating briefly what are the duties of ownership and the position of the State in regard to private property.

Speaking of the relations between capital and labor, the two elements of the actual economic regime, the Holy Father repeats that neither has the right to demand for itself alone all the profits of their mutual collaboration. He recalls the clear words of Leo XIII, "Capital can not do without labor, nor labor without capital."

In the past there has been beyond question an excessive and unjust disproportion of the commodities of life between capital and labor, for on the one hand immense riches are accumulated in the hands of a few, while on the other the proletariat, who form a multitude beyond all counting, have nothing of their own save their hands and the sweat of their brow.

It is therefore absolutely necessary to reconstruct the whole economic system of bringing it back to the requirements of social justice, so as to insure a more equitable distribution of the united proceeds of capital and labor.

Thus will be achieved that uplifting of the proletariat which Leo XIII so ardently desired.

The differences in social conditions in the human family, which were widely decreed by the Creator, must not and can not ever be abolished, but on the other hand the condition of the proletarian worker can not forever be the normal condition of the bulk of mankind. It is essential that the proletariat be enabled gradually to obtain some of the advantages enjoyed by proprietors.

Fair and Just Wages.

In the present order this can be accomplished only by a fair and just wage. Wages therefore must be such as really to satisfy the legitimate requirements of an honest workingman, not only for his person, but also for his family, and to make it possible for him to improve his condition within the limits above described.

Toward the end of the second part the Holy Father traces the general lines according to which the social order must be renewed if it is to correspond with the laws of justice.

All positions between the classes must cease, and harmonious collaboration must be established between the various trade groups.

Work is not any kind of saleable commodity, but one in which the human dignity of the workingman must always be respected.

The various trades, industries and occupations must all work together for the common good, and human society will be the more cordially united and harmoniously organized the more faithfully all and each practice their own professions and follow their own vocations.

Modern Economic World.

In the third part, finally, the holy father, from his lofty apostolic chair, casts a general glance at the actual state of the modern economic world.

He does not condemn it as evil in itself, but he can not fail to recognize that it is seriously warped and burdened with grave abuses.

Free and often unbridled competition has been succeeded by the exaggerated concentration in the hands of a few of the whole economic power, not only of single nations but of the entire world, and this concentration and this power degenerate into tyrannical despotism.

The only efficacious remedy for this disorder is the return to the sane principles of Christian social philosophy, and their prudent application to capital, to labor and to the relations between the two.

Socialism, too, which has boasted of supplying a radical remedy for this same evil—a remedy which was worse than the disease itself—has undergone a profound modification since the days of Leo XIII.

Split in Two Divisions.

It has split into two divisions. The first, which draws all the logical consequences, even the most extreme, from the principles of socialism, has taken the name of communism, and it is well known that its teachings can in no wise be reconciled with the doctrines of the church.

The other, which continues to be known as socialism, has frequently and notably mitigated its program. In many points it has approached, now more, now less, so close to Catholic Socialist principles that some are asking themselves whether now the divergence is not one of name only.

The holy father however does not hesitate to declare solemnly that this socialism (provided, of course, it really remains socialism), even in mitigated form and even though many points of its teachings are in themselves conformable to justice and admitted by the church, is nevertheless a fundamental concept of human society so different from the true concept given to us by the gospel that any agreement in doctrine remains always absolutely impossible.

It is not possible to be at once a good Catholic and a true Socialist.

Recall to Socialists.

At this point the supreme pontiff, with fatherly affection, exhorts and entreats those erring sons who, deceived by false hopes have gone to swell the ranks of socialism, to return without delay to the bosom of the church which they have done ill to abandon.

He urges them to enroll themselves among those groups of generous men who, according to the principles given by Leo XIII, are striving with every nerve to establish on a sound basis justice and charity in human society.

The holy father then passes on to indicate with greater precision the remedies for present evils.

With keen insight he observes that the root of the disorder, both in the modern economic world in general and in socialism, lies in men fixing their eyes on earthly goods without heed of God and of things eternal.

The principal remedy therefore must be applied to the root itself by raising up men's hearts and minds to God and filling them with nobler and purer aspirations. To this end the first urgent need is that men send their efforts to a serious improvement of manners and to the establishment of the reign of justice by which the whole social and economic order should be inspired.

True and Efficacious Bond.

Even then, however, a wide field will always remain open for charity which is and will ever be the only true and efficacious bond which can unite all men together and make them one single family.

In this renovation of society on the basis of the gospel and of Christian charity all men of good will ought to concur.

On this account the holy father rejoices to see the initiative and zeal with which not only the clergy but also the laity in large numbers and even many young men filled with the spirit of Catholic action, are laboring in the various countries, and he stimulates them with fatherly encouragement to devote themselves untiringly to this noble end.

For if a condition of affairs diametrically opposed to Christian principles were to prevail, as many insist, the disaster would be terrible. Strong as she is in God's infallible promises, the Church does not fear for herself, but she fears for so many of her sons, for so many souls who would be lost.

All must work together therefore for the common good in complete harmony and discipline, each at his own post and in his own sphere seeking only the interests of good and the kingdom of Jesus Christ.

With this paternal exhortation concludes the important document which the holy father offers as a precious jubilee gift to his dear sons, and through them, to the whole world, wishing and imploring for all the blessings of Heaven."

Vatican City, May 15 (A.P.).—Following is the text of a radio address delivered today by Pope Pius XI, translated by the Associated Press as the Pontiff spoke:

You are welcome beloved children, you whom the powerful voice of our immortal predecessor, Leo XIII, almost reechoing in eternal splendor has called together in the house of the common father.

You are twice and thrice welcome while from so many countries far and near you bring us so worthy a representation of the workers of the whole world.

You bring us a representation actuated by that happy concord and union of workers and givers of work, of directors and workmen which is necessary for the advantage of every one.

Our very dear Roman people has given you welcome, letting you participate in the unforgettable demonstration of our ancestral faith toward the Mother of God in commemoration of the great council of Ephesus which was celebrated fifteen centuries ago.

The Bishop of Rome is happy and glad to represent a people so faithful and pious. The Mother of God who gives you this welcome, beloved children, smiles her blessing from her venerated image.

Mentions Polish People.

Having been able to speak in three languages, we would like to be able to speak in others also, especially to our dear Polish, but since we have already spoken in Italian, French and German, largely understood also by the other national groups, and having said the same thing in them we will continue in this manner.

Moreover, while some are listening, the others can read what we are saying in the booklets published for this purpose.

"The booklets, as you have been able to see, announce our encyclical, quadragesimo anno, which will appear shortly as a comment on the rerum novarum of Leo XIII.

It is already in the press and will be published within a few days.

Reminder of Encyclical.

We have thought to make this a memorial and a reminder of the encyclical of Leo XIII. This we have done in our new encyclical and in memory of this we shall give to each a small medal depicting the subject of our two encyclicals and their author.

We have promised to give you something very short and which can be put into three words all the eloquence of the rerum novarum and of the quadragesimo anno, for whatever the Catholic program or Catholic direction, individual or social.

Here are the three words—prayer, action, sacrifice.

They are few words, but full of significance.

These are the spiritual words of the Catholic activities—words which also shine forth on so many of your beautiful banners—glorious, reverent words; words which we have judged righteous and honorable for people of great kinds; words which signify on these flags your faith, your ardor and your action, and are emblems of your sacrifice, you who are the successors of past peoples, you my beloved children.

Prayer, action and sacrifice.

Terms Are Explained.

Prayer, in the first place—prayer—the most essential condition of all "because without Me you are able to do nothing."

Prayer is the expression of the greatest faith which helps us to make easy the apostolate. But, above all, it is that which Jesus calls the one most necessary thing, for the Kingdom of God is within you.

Prayer, the first and essential condition of all truthful apostolate prayer which arms and prepares us with divine aid.

Action is the next thing both in the domestic circle and in social circles—action both private and public, both in foundation and organization; action of charity and of justice and of the peace of Christ among the classes, the peoples and the apostolate, of edification, of prayer, of the written word, and of the spoken word.

The individual apostolate, above all social, has a greater field in which to work, so great are the needs of the present day that call for help.

Church's Example Cited.

The Church of Christ, through Divine command always well doing, has given the example everywhere and through all ages. Everywhere has it preached holiness and the morality of Almighty God, and it has always besought the cooperation of all its sons.

What is even more necessary than action is sacrifice, perseverence, method, and discipline in your work, which demand the submission of your personal ideas and also demand your coordination and your subordination as workers.

These imply struggles, difficult, dangerous struggles, which require intelligence and perseverence and obedience, and these will lead you to a final Divine victory.

Pray, action and sacrifice. This is what we recommend, what the encyclical "Rerum Novarum" has laid down, and what our encyclical now promulgates anew in order to continue and follow in the path of our predecessor's encyclical.

Prayer, action and sacrifice. There is the need of this fortieth year to continue and to enlarge the plan laid down by the encyclical "Rerum Novarum."

Prayer, action and sacrifice—there is what Holy Mother Church demands of those who labor with her in the vineyard of the Gospel and in the Divine work of the apostolate.

Social Prayer Stressed.

Prayer, individual, domestic, public and social, particularly social.

Prayer, action and sacrifice—there is what is necessary for you, the children of our predilection. That is what you need; you, the workers; you, the financiers; you, who finance all industry, labor in justice and charity, in fraternity and in peaceful cooperation, in the practice of all virtues, in the respect of all rights and values, and particularly moral values, toward the weak and the humble—above all, toward the weak.

May the Holy Spirit descend upon you and upon your brothers and sisters in labor and also upon those who give you employment, and upon those who lend to your work the responsibility and intelligence of their management.

"La mia benedizione cada su tutti vo." (May my blessing descend upon all of you.)

Then the pontiff imparted his apostolic blessing.

Wage Cut Rescinded, Strike Ends.

Mansfield, Ohio, May 15 (A.P.).—The Empire Steel Corporation late today agreed to meet the demands of their 1,600 employes, thus ending the strike that had tied up the plant for several days. Under the agreement the company rescinded a wage cut which caused the men to walk out.

HOOVER KEEPS EYE ON WAGE SCHEDULES

Officials Maintain Silence on Labor's Dictum Pay Must Not Be Cut.

(Associated Press.)

Reactions to the American Federation of Labor dictum that business and industry must preserve existing wage levels or face strikes are being watched closely by the administration.

Official silence prevailed on the subject, however, as well as upon the proposal Thursday of the American Legion that President Hoover call a new economic conference to foster employment.

Secretary Doak, a former head of the Railroad Brotherhood, was out of the city yesterday. President Green, of the Federation, also had departed for Texas after asserting that with a number of industries reducing or planning to reduce wages, labor would strike in opposition to such a course.

Meanwhile, President Hoover announced there had been 3,551 more departures of aliens than arrivals during each of the past three months. He said Acting Secretary White of the Labor Department had informed him these departures were of "large importance" in the labor situation.

The Chief Executive has been keenly interested in wage levels since the stock market crash in the fall of 1929. In December of that year, he obtained an agreement from industrialists and labor leaders that wages would be maintained and in return no strikes would be called.

After his return from a trip to the Caribbean in March, he let it be known that he was pleased there had been no "general wage reductions."

A member of the President's Cabinet interested in business said yesterday that in his opinion there had been no general wage cuts in the major industries. He said the railroads, one of the largest employers of labor, had not reduced wages and if they decided to do so, the level could not be lowered until a year had passed.

The Federation has attributed to "certain banking interests and certain employers" an attempt to bring about a general cut in pay, and said it was "only a step from reductions in wages to continuous, permanent unemployment."

The unemployment problem has come recently before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States and the International Chamber of Commerce. Secretary Mellon, breaking a long silence, told the latter organization "every man that can be kept at work or put back into employment adds to the Nation's buying power and so stimulates further production."

He held there had been an effort on the part of the Government and of private business during the depression not only to prevent reduction in wages but to keep the maximum number of men employed.

NEW LABOR CHARTER IS PLEDGED BY POPE

ruary 12, in which Nation-wide networks participated, as they did today.

Fading and static were entirely absent. Engineers said the reception on this side of the Atlantic was as near ideal as they could hope for.

As the speakers talked in various tongues, in the background could be heard the band of the Palatine Guards and the singing of the chorus of the pilgrims.

The broadcast, like that of February 12, when Pope Pius dedicated RVJ, was brought to America on the short wave channel of 19.84 meters, picked up at several points on the Atlantic Coast and transferred to both the National Broadcasting Co. and the Columbia networks.

Cardinal Hayes sent the following cablegram to Cardinal Pacelli, papal secretary of state:

"We have all rejoiced to hear the voice of the vicar of Christ and his timely message received most clearly without any static interference. We present our afilial homage to the Holy Father as we humbly ask his paternal and apostolic blessing."

prevented a panic among the passengers."

"McDonald found the flames had eaten out toward the wing, so he played the extinguisher on them. Komdat maneuvered the plane so that the flames ate away from the wing. Then Komdat landed his plane with scarcely a jar."

Aboard also were C. A. Tolson, of Washington, assistant director of the Bureau of Investigation; Parkton McCrae and his daughter, Miss Marion McCrae, Baltimore; R. J. O'Donnell, of Atlanta, Ga.; Jack Farrington, Nassau, Bahamas, and Allen S. Lund, of Los Angeles, among others.

Officials of the line said that Komdat's cool handling of the emergency probably saved the lives of every one on the ship, as "anything could have happened."

Neither the pilot nor Lieut. R. C. Hood, in charge of the Army air detachment at the arsenal, could determine the cause of the blaze, which did slight damage. The cabin, which is fireproof, was not damaged.

Lieut. Hood took charge of the plane and had it rolled into a hangar at the arsenal. A guard was placed around it to watch for a second outbreak of the fire, which, it was believed, might still be smoldering within the framework of the craft.

Komdat, according to officials of the transport company, is one of the most experienced fliers in the country and has between 7,000 and 8,000 flying hours to his credit. He never has had a serious accident while carrying passengers, they said.

For his own part the pilot declared: "Everybody aboard kept his head, and there was little excitement. We might even have gone on a little farther without losing the ship, but it was just as well we landed when we did.

"The only time flames were visible to the passengers was when we landed. Somebody opened some windows in the cabin, so that the smoke inside was not so bad, but the draft, no doubt, helped the fire.

"Nobody has an idea how it started. All we can do is to report 'cause unknown.' The motors are separated from the rest of the ship, and they were not affected at all."

The plane is equipped with two motors.

6 YEARS' NAVY STUDY URGED AT ANNAPOLIS

Board of Visitors Also Recommends Putting On Building Program.

(Associated Press.)

Recommendations for a study of the advisability of extending the Naval Academy course from 4 to 6 years and for a building program to provide homes for naval officers assigned to the school were embodied in a report being prepared yesterday by the academy's board of visitors.

The report was based on the annual investigation of Naval Academy administration by the board, composed of members of the House and Senate and appointees of President Hoover. The board recommended a study by qualified educators and naval officers with a view to rearranging the curriculum and to consider the question of extending the course of training.

Members of the board were impressed with the amount of training the students were required to absorb in the present four-year term, and, without making any specific recommendations for changes in the curriculum, suggested it should be thoroughly studied by experts.

After a preliminary inquiry into the course of training, members of a subcommittee, headed by President Angell, of Yale University, suggested more stress should be laid by the academy on cultural education.

The board found that 229 naval officers, assigned to the academy for short terms as graduate students and faculty members, were required to obtain living quarters outside the academy, and that the shortage of accommodations in Annapolis made this a financial burden.

It recommended the inauguration of a building program with the construction of five six-family apartments at a cost of $360,000, to be followed by the building of similar units later.

Members of the board said they were "much impressed" with the discipline and spirit maintained at the school and had no criticism of the institution's administration. The annual inspection ended yesterday.

Annapolis Mental Tests Qualify 509 Aspirants

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 15.—Thirty-two appointees of President Hoover, 45 designated from the enlisted ranks of the Navy by Secretary Adams and 20 from the Naval Reserve force, are included among a list of 509 candidates for midshipmen in the Naval Academy who were found qualified in the April mental examinations for admission, it was announced today by officials of the institution.

The examinations were conducted under civil service regulations at various points throughout the Nation, and the papers were marked by instructors of the academic departments here. Nearly 200 lads qualified in similar tests held in February. All candidates will be examined as to physical qualifications at the academy, beginning early in June, when the new fourth class will be organized. It is estimated the class will have a roster of about 600. Next year's entering class will be considerably smaller, probably not more than 450, owing to the act of the last Congress, which reduced the number of appointments allowed senators and representatives from 4 to 3.

The presidential appointees, most of whom are sons of naval officers or of Washington, D. C., are:

R. F. Dillon, jr., T. P. Cummins, J. B. Guy, jr., H. P. Knowles, jr., F. K. Mayer, jr., L. R. Hird, N. A. M. Gayler, W. C. Fite, C. A. Neyman, jr., W. J. Bettens, H. G. Shonerd, jr., J. S. DELAY IN MAPPING U. S. IS CRITICIZED

Engineers Attack Federal Cooperation Policy With States.

Unless the existing Federal policy of cooperation with the States is altered, the topographic mapping of the United States can not be completed within the 20-year period contemplated by the Temple act of 1925, it was declared yesterday by the administrative board of the American Engineering Council, meeting at the Cosmos Club.

"To a certain extent the purpose of the act has been defeated," it was said. "The Temple act has been further curtailed by restricting the Federal appropriations so that a large portion of the funds are not available unless equal sums are appropriated by the States. This could be readily corrected in the annual Interior Department appropriation bill.

"In the last appropriation bill," the board announced, "an unprecedented provision was inserted which required the States to bear 50 per cent of the cost of printing and publication of the maps. This has always been a Federal function. No other branch of the Federal Government requires in its cooperative work with the States that the States share in the cost of publication.

"The maximum of cooperative funds from the States has been reached. In fact, for the last three years, these have declined. To require the States to share in the cost of map printing will only still further delay the completion of the topographical mapping of the United States."

In adopting such a stand, the engineers followed suggestions made by Representative Henry W. Temple, of Pennsylvania, author of the act, to Dr. W. C. Mendenhall, acting director of the U. S. Geological Survey.

The engineers reaffirmed their opposition to legislation which would authorize the Army Air Corps to make tests of aircraft and aerial equipment on the ground that an agency of the Government would, with a few limited exceptions, be enabled to enter into competition with private enterprise and carry on a multiplicity of experiments which sponsors of such legislation have not defined.

The council's committee on communications, of which Edwin F. Wendt, of Washington, is chairman, presented a report to the board in which it said that "the Nation faces a revolution in its economic and social life."

Suit Would Force Davison To Buy Anne Arundel Farm

F. Trubee Davison, Assistant Secretary of War in Charge of Aviation, was named defendant in a suit filed in the District Supreme Court yesterday to compel him to go through with an agreement to purchase a tract of land in Anne Arundel County.

The land, known as Turkey Point Farm, consists of 183 acres and is situated in the South River section of the county. It is one of the old historic farm sites of Maryland.

The suit complains that in the summer of 1930 agents of Mr. Davison approached the owners of the farm and offered to buy the land for $128,000. An agreement was signed between the parties, the suit alleges, and while the title to the land was being searched, Mr. Davison notified the sellers that he did not wish to go through with the sale.

The objections of his mother and wife were cited by him, it is alleged, as the reason for not wishing to conclude the purchase. The suit names Jennie M., Howard M., Annie, Louisa Evelyn, Lillian Skirven, H. Nelson and Morton Busick as the plaintiffs.

ATTACK ON EMBASSY LIQUOR IS RESUMED

Legation Rum Theft Brings Move to End Privilege to Diplomats.

Agitation for withdrawal of immunity from the prohibition laws from foreign diplomats developed again last night as a sequel to the attack on Dr. Don Carlos Leiva, Charge d'Affaires of the Legation of El Salvador, who was beaten by liquor thieves early Wednesday.

Senator Brookhart (Republican), of Iowa, a prohibitionist, expressed willingness to join a movement to forbid the presence of liquors in the embassies and legations.

Earlier, Representative Shafer, of Wisconsin, antiprohibitionist, said he intends to ask a committee of the next Congress to determine why "law-enforcement officers of the Federal Government are permitting foreign representatives to violate the eighteenth amendment."

The police, who have been accused by Dr. Leiva of failing to give adequate protection to foreign representatives, yesterday released all suspects they had taken in the case, after alibis presented by them were substantiated.

Although Dr. Leiva has accused the authorities of failing to afford protection, Secretary of State Stimson, after an inquiry, expressed himself of the opinion that they are adequately protected.

Representative Shafer, in a letter to Secretary Stimson, said he would propose to the House committee on expenditures, that it ascertain the "amount of diplomatic liquor diverted to nondiplomatic channels."

Dr. Leiva, in a report to his government, said the legation had been visited four times by thieves in the last four months, and he is concerned for the safety of his wife and himself. He said he did not care whether this Government replaced the seventeen stolen cases of liquor.

"This matter, as much as I regret it," he said, "has now become an international situation. I trust it will be satisfactorily adjusted between my government and this."

tion and not be prosecuting decent citizens for making 4 per cent beer while at the same time loaning Government funds to enable other citizens to make 20 per cent wine."

Last year the California grape interests received loans from the Farm Board aggregating about $19,000,000, of which, it was said yesterday, about $5,125,000 has been repaid. Of last year's total, it was said, only about $2,500,000 went to Fruit Industries, Ltd., of which about $1,500,000 was used for construction of permanent physical facilities.

So far there has been no formal application for a loan this year, but the subject has been discussed informally by representatives of the board and the grape control board of California, and officials here have been informed that a representative of the California organization will be in Washington next week to present a formal proposition. Press reports from California have been to the effect that the industry wants about $14,000,000 this year.

NYE AGAIN TO CALL CANNON ON FUNDS

Senate Investigator Plans Another Effort to Get Data on $65,300.

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Chairman Gerald P. Nye, of the Senate campaign fund committee, announced today that Bishop James Cannon, jr., would be called to testify in a renewed attempt to determine what disposition was made of $65,300 anti-Smith campaign funds.

Senator Nye conferred with Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, on the next step in the inquiry, in view of the refusal last week of Miss Ada Burroughs, of Richmond, Va., to testify.

Miss Burroughs was treasurer of the headquarters committee of the anti-Smith Democrats, of which the bishop was chairman. Senator Nye said the committee had concluded the only thing it can do is to lay her refusal before the Senate, which can then start contempt proceedings, if it sees fit.

Because of her refusal, Senator Nye said, it will be necessary "to develop the facts from other sources and witnesses." He said the investigation would proceed and a hearing, which he hopes will be the last, would be held in Washington as soon as possible.

The $65,000 intrusted to the Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church South was given in 1928 by E. C. Jameson, New York insurance magnate. Representative George Holden Tinkham, Massachusetts, charged the bishop failed to account for all of the sum.

Senator Nye said the fact today's conference was held here had no special significance, but was merely a matter of convenience.

(Associated Press.)

Bishop James Cannon, jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, is prepared to remain here for the new hearings by the Senate campaign funds committee into his use of funds in the 1928 campaign.

However, there has been an intimation from friends that he will pursue the same course as Miss Ada L. Burroughs, of Richmond, and refuse to testify if he is called.

The challenge made by Miss Burroughs of the committee's authority read similar to the reasons given by the bishop in challenging the committee. He has not stated whether he will testify.

FORMER POLICEMEN LINKED IN RUM RING

Bail for 14 Taken in Raids at Cambridge, Md., Is Set at $126,000.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, Md., May 15.—Two of the fourteen men arrested earlier in the week in connection with the smuggling of liquor on the Eastern Shore were identified today as former New Jersey State policemen. The identification was made when the prisoners were arraigned before J. Frank Supplee, United States Commissioner, on charges of conspiracy to smuggle liquor into the United States.

Bail totaling $126,000 was set by Commissioner Supplee for the fourteen men. Only six of them were released. The others will remain in the city jail for a preliminary hearing May 25.

Those released were Harwood Park, James Wilson, Axel Ohlsen, George Hensen, Frank Hoenes, and Ole Hemmes. Bail for Park, Hoenes and Wilson was set at $10,000 each, while bond of $5,000 was given for Ohlsen, and $3,000 each for Hensen and Hemmes.

Park Held Radio Operator.

According to Government officials, Park was the radio operator for the smugglers, while Wilson operated the automobile which was used as a convoy for the liquor laden trucks. Hoenes was said to be master of the Hiawatha, one of the two speed boats seized, and the other two were members of the boats' crew.

Bail of $15,000 each was set for Benjamin Stearns, Timothy Connolly, Guy Parkhurst and Benjamin Feldman. Connolly and Parkhurst were the men identified as former State troopers. When arrested they gave the names of Timothy McClosky and Frank Weber, respectively, while Feldman gave the name of Benjamin Frye.

Stearns and Feldman were alleged to be the leaders of the gang.

Commissioner Supplee set bail at $5,000 each for Joseph Underwood and Thomas Kruttel, said to be the drivers of the two motor trucks which were seized.

Bond of $10,000 was asked for Fred Johnson, master of the Whippoorwill, the second of the two speed boats seized, and bail of $5,000 was set for John Erickson, arrested with Johnson.

Most From New York.

All of the prisoners were said to be from New York and Brooklyn, except Park, who is from Scranton, Pa., and Stearns, who gave a Philadelphia address. The defendants were represented by Morris Greenberg, of New York, and Morton P. Fisher, Baltimore attorney.

The fourteen prisoners were brought to Baltimore in a bus today by George W. Collier, United States marshal, and four deputies. They had been kept in the Cambridge Jail since their arrest Tuesday. When the party arrived in Baltimore they went to the city jail, where the prisoners were locked up.

Later, after a conference between Simon E. Sobeloff, United States attorney; Robert D. Ford, assistant prohibition administrator here, and defense counsel the men were brought from the jail in automobiles and arraigned.

According to Mr. Ford, the men arrested are part of the same gang which was surprised by the agents two months ago on the Eastern Shore some distance from Cambridge. At that time Mr. Ford with a group of officers found 45 men, some of them heavily armed, and five trucks apparently waiting to unload a rum-runner.

The boat, however, did not put in to land and the dry agents were forced to let the men and the trucks go as no liquor was found in their posaession. None of the men seen then, however, was caught this time, Mr. Ford said.

Check on Prisoners' Records.

Prohibition agents and customs officials are attempting to learn whether any of the prisoners have police records in other cities. Their fingerprints and pictures have been sent to New York and Philadelphia, it was said.

More than 6,000 cases of imported liquors were seized by the agents in the two-day raids of the Eastern Shore. The liquor was brought to Baltimore yesterday on one of the captured trucks and the two motor boats. The liquor was stored in the customs house.

The boats, it was said, probably will be converted into chasers, as they are declared to be faster than any ship now operating on the Chesapeake Bay.

Each vessel is equipped with three 12-cylinder motors and is capable of a speed of 55 miles an hour, it was asserted.

This seizure is the largest made by local prohibition and customs men for more than a year. On December 31, 1929, Coast Guard officers captured 1,400 cases of liquor and a number of men at Ocean City, Md.

KUHNS HORSE WINS $500 STAKE EVENT

Army Entries Predominate at Third Day of Show, Which Ends Today.

Brown Man, 6-year-old horse, owned by J. U. Kuhns, of Greensburg, Pa., captured first honors in the three-gaited saddle horse $500 stake class yesterday at the National Capital Horse Show, being held at Bradley Farms. Love Token, owned and ridden by Mrs. Allen Potts, and a horse that has taken some honor in every class in which it has been entered, came off with second honors in that event. Third place went to Vi Dana, owned by Mrs. R. W. Butterworth, of Paterson, N. J., and fourth to Glenn Allen, owned by the Bell-Ho Stables of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Bell, at Hohokus, N. J.

Yesterday, the third day of the annual show and the first clear day so far, drew the largest crowd to date.

Army Horses Take Prizes.

Army horses predominated in entries yesterday, with many of the horses from Fort Myer and those belonging to Army officers taking first and second honors. The three classes for Army horses only were colorful events.

Now that the show is almost over, officials of the association and those sponsoring the affair declared yesterday that from the standpoint of entries, class of horses and public interest this has been one of the most successful in the show's history. The number of exhibitors is increasing yearly, and exhibits from widely separated sections of the country are being noted each year.

The first event yesterday was an interesting handicap jump, postponed from Thursday because of darkness. This was won by Precaution, from the Foxcatcher Farms at Wilmington, Del. Second honors went to Gold Foyle, owned by Percy M. Neipold, of Washington; third to Miss Clebourne, from Fort Myer, and fourth to Sir Knight, from the same stable.

The first class from yesterday's regular schedule was a competition between troopers' mounts from Fort Myer, in which nine entries participated.

Americana II Wins Again.

In the open saddle class, Americana II, champion of last year's show and owned by Henry L. Fonda, of Charlottesville, Va., came in for first honors, with Happy Days, from the Bell-Ho Stables, taking second. Third went to The Kansas City Star, owned by John T. Harrington, of Youngstown, Ohio, and fourth to Easing Through, belonging to J. U. Kuhns, of Greensburg, Pa.

Winners in other classes and their owners are:

Five-gaited saddle class—Una Woodford, Mr. Kuhns, owner, first; Modern Miss, Mr. Harrington, owner, second; Flashing Lady, from the Bell-Ho Stables, third. Only three entries.

Corinthian class, ridden in full hunting attire and open to all hunters—Royal Earn, from the Rolling Rock Farms, first; Lieut. Mansfield, E. M. Woolf, of Upperville, Va., owner, second; Peaen, owned by Dare Patterson, of Middleburg, Va., third, and Eminence, owned by Roger Bayley, of Upperville, Va., fourth.

Open saddle horse class—Brown Man, Mr. Kuhns owner, first; Love Token, Mrs. Potts, owner, second; Vi Dana, Mrs. Butterworth, owner, third, and Glenn Allen, from the Bell-Ho Stables, fourth.

Officer's chargers—By Jingo, owned by Col. Harry N. Cootes, first; Nancy Andrews, owned by Maj. W. M. Grimes, of Washington, second; Zephyr King, owned by Maj. F. Gilbreath, third. There was no fourth. First prize was a handsome trophy presented by Maj. George S. Patton, jr.

Royal Earn Wins Capital Trophy.

Model hunter class, for the National Capital trophy—Royal Earn, from the Rolling Rock Farms, first; Portlight, owned by E. L. Redmon, of Middleburg, Va., second; Lieut. Mansfield, owned by Mr. Woolf, third, and Prince H., owned by Mrs. Simon Patterson, of Pittsburgh, Pa., fourth.

Handy hunter class—Egoist, owned by Mrs. C. D. Herron, of Bethesda, Md., first, winning with 24 seconds and three faults; Temptation, from Fort Myer, second; Campanile, from the Donnelly Stables at Boston, Mass., third; Gold Foyle, owned by Percy M. Neipold, of Washington, fourth.

Hack and hunter class—Campanile, from the Donnelly Stables, first; Blunderbuss, owned by Miss Doris M. Blondell, from Montclair, N. J., second; Tyrone, from the Trillora Farms at Shrewsbury, N. J., third, and Your Way, owned by Mr. Redmon, fourth.

Polo ponies class—Red Eagle, owned by Maj. G. S. Patton, jr., first; Scandel, owned by Lieut. Gordon Rogers, second; Tinker, owned by Maj. J. M. Eager, third, and Wichi Wichi, also owned by Maj. Patton, fourth.

Event Is Postponed.

The special class for hunters which was to have been the last event yesterday, was postponed until 10 o'clock this morning because of darkness.

Events this morning, with the one exception, will be for children, with ponies and small horses being entered by young riders over 5 years and under 12. Several trophies and prizes will be awarded.

This afternoon the ladies' saddle horses will be shown, followed by the triple bar jumps, pony hunt teams, hunt teams, pair saddle horses, ladies' hunters, five-gaited saddle classes, and the three-gaited saddle horses stake. There also will be the Washington hunter $500 stake, and the awarding of the championship trophies. Today's events will close the show.

may be that we have grown indifferent to any," he read. "In the world of Methodism we seem to have lost the method."

"The economic situation disturbs the church as well as the Nation, and crowds out our capacities as a Christian community, and has brought forth no leadership in these days competent to meet the situation. There are many voices, in Congress and in the church, in the press and in the pulpit, but no leadership has yet been found capable of taking the chaotic conditions which signalize our times and bringing them into line with the purposes and plans of the Almighty.

Cites Opportunity for Church.

"These days bring forth the greatest opportunity ever presented in any age or in any time for the church of Christ. This is the time for the church of all institutions in the world to have something to say."

Short talks regarding the report were made by J. C. Williams, of Columbus, Ohio; J. H. Straughn, of Baltimore, and Dr. Ward. Music was rendered by the Western Maryland College chorus of 100 voices.

A morning session of the convention, a young people's rally, a group conference on men's work and a meeting of the woman's missionary convention also were held. The women reelected their slate of officers for another year, including Mrs. E. B. McRoberts, of Glenshaw, Pa., president; Mrs. Arthur Hinkle, of Fairmont, W. Va., vice president, and Mrs. Marie Thompson, of Baltimore, secretary.

SENATOR CLAUDE A. SWANSON.

Swanson Stricken At Meeting Here

Virginia Senator Recovers After Attack; Ready to Go Abroad.

(Associated Press.)

Senator Claude Swanson, of Virginia, collapsed yesterday, but revived quickly. Leaving a meeting of the War Policies Commission, of which he is a member, he fell to the floor. Friends lifted him to the committee table, while a doctor was being called. He was thought to have suffered an attack of indigestion. He is 69 years old.

After resting on the committee table for half an hour, Senator Swanson was able to walk to his own office in another part of the Senate Office Building.

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., May 15.—News of the sudden illness of Senator Claude Swanson in Washington today came as a surprise here. He left on Wednesday for Washington, and is due to sail next Tuesday for Europe to pursue his study of the best means of stabilizing silver. Mrs. Swanson is already abroad, having sailed early this week to attend the Colonial Exposition at Paris.

2 YOUTHS CAPTURED WHILE RIFLING SAFE

Probationer Is Taken After Woman Sounds Alarm Calling Police.

Two men were arrested early yesterday in the alleged act of rifling a safe in the office of the Automotive Supply Co. at Pennsylvania avenue and Twenty-first street northwest, which contained $900 in cash and checks.

Charles E. Smith, 20 years old, of Washington Circle, and Francis D. Carman, 20 years old, of K near Twenty-first street northwest, were captured by four policemen who broke into the place after being summoned by Mrs. Miriam Tucker, who lives nearby, who heard noises coming from the office.

On an alarm given by Mrs. Tucker, Policemen A. T. Davis, F. P. Martin, E. R. Franklin and S. F. Gravely, went to the place, and their flashlights picked out the figures of Smith and Carman, scooping money from the safe.

The policemen broke open the door and ordered the men to surrender. Smith and Carman submitted, handing their safe-cracking tools to the policemen. They had removed the safe from the office to the workshop where they hammered a hole in the bottom.

In carrying the safe from the office, the safe was dropped and Smith's foot was crushed, for which injury he was treated at Emergency Hospital.

The top of Smith's automobile, found parked nearby, police said, had been stolen from another automobile. Smith, police said, has a police record and is now on probation, having been implicated in the robbery of a Pennsylvania avenue poolroom two years ago.

Police are trying to connect the men with several safe jobs in the last few months, including an attempt early yesterday to force the safe of the Blossom Inn, at 1315 New York avenue.

This is the fiction scoop of 1931, a vivid and dramatic story of a typical American family. It is a sharp contrast between yesterday's generation and today's youth, tracing the evolution of morality in marriage. It is an absorbing love story, distinctly the book of the year.

Don't miss it!

BUILDING DEDICATED TO SOCIAL SCIENCES

Brookings Institution Is Pledged to Research by Officers.

The imposing new eight-story permanent home for the Brookings Institution at 722 Jackson place last night was dedicated to research in the social sciences with a simplicity in marked contrast to the subject of dedication.

The short address of Dr. L. W. Rowe, vice president of the institution and director general of the Pan-American Union, which formally opened the building, followed a busy day in which the board of trustees met during the morning, were guests at a luncheon, and dinner at 7:30 o'clock.

Japan has but two alternatives in an attempt to solve a pressing population problem—further industrial development or restriction of population increase, Dr. Harold G. Moulton, president of the institution, declared in his address at the dedication meeting last night.

Continuous Expansion Necessary.

In discussing the country's economic and financial situation, it is necessary to differentiate sharply between certain immediate difficulties due to the severe business depression of today and certain more fundamental and enduring problems, he said.

"Looking forward," he said, "we know that as a result of the very rapid expansion of population between 1915 and 1930, during the next fifteen to twenty years the number of new workers who annually enter the labor market will materially exceed the number of older workers who pass beyond the stage of employment. Accordingly, if standards of living are to be increased in the future, or even maintained at present levels, there must be continual industrial expansion."

Japan must solve her problem internally, Dr. Moulton said. He expressed the belief that she must attack it from both the angle of industrial development and birth control.

Tells of Government Research.

Jerome D. Greene, member of the board of trustees of Lee-Higginson Co., New York, in speaking of the significance of research in the social sciences, traced the history of Government work in this direction. There is much to be done in the field of economic adjustment, he declared, adding that he believed this might be done by economic planning.

Dr. Rowe said the Brookings Institution occupies a unique position, in that it has no counterpart in any other country. Its founding, he said, was the outgrowth of the special needs of this country and it is destined to play an ever-broadening role in the evolution of the Government of the United States along intelligent and scientific lines.

This morning a conference on cooperative research will be held at the Institution Building. Speakers include Robert S. Lynd, permanent secretary, Social Research Council, and J. B. Condliffe, formerly research secretary, Institute of Pacific Relations, leading the topic; Henry C. Taylor, director, Vermont Commission on Country Life, and Louis Brownlow, director of the Public Administration Clearing House.

Hoover Army Cut Praised by Reed

Abandonment of Many of Posts Held Backbone of Economy Move.

(Associated Press.)

Chairman Reed, of the Senate military affairs committee, said at the White House yesterday that in his opinion President Hoover will receive the full support of the country in affecting economies in the War Department.

The Pennsylvania Republican said his call on the President did not deal with the conference held at the President's Rapidan Camp last week-end with War Department officials. After that conference, it was announced that plans had been made to effect "real economies" in the department.

Senator Reed said concentration of troops in a few Army posts and the abandonment of a large number of obsolete and useless posts was the backbone of the economy program.

NANKING MAY ISSUE SILVER PARLEY CALL

Castle Assures Minister Wu U. S. Will Cooperate in Conference.

(Associated Press.)

Minister Wu, of China, informed Undersecretary of State Castle yesterday that the Nanking government is "seriously considering" the issuance shortly of a call for an international conference on silver.

The minister discussed the world silver situation with the Undersecretary shortly after Mr. Castle, in the first public statement on the subject directly attributed to the administration, said the United States would cooperate with any nation which issued a summons for an international silver conference.

After conferring with Undersecretary Castle, who is Acting Secretary of State while Secretary Stimson is in New York, the minister said his government was devoting close attention to the subject. The Nanking government, he added, looked upon a solution of the silver question as of "vital and intimate interest" to it.

The minister's talk with Mr. Castle was the second he has had with Department officials on the silver question, having previously indicated that his government was anxious that a silver conference be called. Yesterday's conversation followed closely upon press dispatches from the Eastern Republic indicating that the Nanking government was on the verge of actively moving toward a conference.

State Department officials said yesterday they were convinced a call for a conference by one of the Eastern powers, such as Japan or China, would be issued shortly. They consider the silver question, an acute one because of the greatly diminished price of the metal, to be primarily of interest to the Orient.

44 Orders Pledge Yorktown Fete Aid

Representatives Gather in House Office Building to Discuss Plans.

Representatives of 44 national patriotic, fraternal and civic organizations, in session yesterday in the caucus hall, House Office Building, pledged their wholehearted cooperation with the United States Yorktown Sesquicentennial Commission and the Yorktown Sesquicentennial Association in making the celebration next October 16-19 of the 150th anniversary of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis a success.

After hearing the elaborate four-day program outlined and an invitation to participate in the celebration, the delegates agreed to report back to their organizations and suggest that they become patrons of the event and lend every possible cooperation.

Dr. W. A. R. Goodwin, president of the Yorktown Association, presided and extended the national organizations an invitation to become patrons.

New York Avenue Presbyterian Church Also Purchases Additional Ground.

Historic New York Avenue Presbyterian Church has bought another piece of land, and has called an associate minister. The former indicates an expansion program of importance and the latter a broadening of the church's activities. It has been nearly a year now since this church has had an associate minister, and great care was taken in searching for the right man before the call was issued. The Rev. Andrew Melrose Brodie, D. D., is the minister called, and he has accepted the invitation.

The property secured lies just west of the Parish House and is now occupied by the Blossom Inn Restaurant. It is the second lot secured recently, and will probably complete the extension the church has in mind. The next step, it is understood, will be to tear down the old buildings on all of this land and erect in their place a modern parish hall or Sunday school building. In these times in which we live these buildings go by the names of School of Religious Education.

Begins on June 1.

Dr. Brodie will begin his ministry with this church on June 1, and he and Mrs. Brodie will be formally presented to the congregation in a reception to be held on Thursday evening, June 4. His coming will take a heavy load from the shoulders of the minister, Dr. Sizoo, who, because of the popularity of his preaching, which draws capacity congregations morning and evening, is compelled to spend most of his time in his study at work on his sermons. It is said on very good authority that Dr. Sizoo spends not less than ten hours a day several days in the week in his library, hard at work as a student and scholar should work.

As chairman of the commission which studied the problems of the war and the religious outlook in 1919, Dr. Brodie achieved Nation-wide distinction. This service was followed by his leadership of the Commission of Good Will delegates to the Near East in 1923, in which undertaking he added to his reputation.

No Stranger to Capital.

It was while engaged in this service that he made his home in Washington, where he resided for several years, and so is no stranger to this community.

Dr. Brodie's active ministry has been in Cincinnati and Manistee, Mich., Watertown, N. Y., and Wichita, Kans., where he built a large new church. A graduate of Guelph College, Ontario, Canada, and the Chicago Theological Seminary, he holds the degree of S. T. D. from Olivet College, Michigan, and D. D. from Berea College in Kentucky. He is a trustee of the Chicago Theological Seminary, Emporia College and Berea College. As a writer he has a number of works to his credit, one of them being "Outside Lessons on Life."

Revivalist to Tell Story of Her Life

Mrs. Edith Mae Pennington, the evangelist, who is conducting revival services in the Masonic Temple Auditorium, swings into the fifth week of her campaign tomorrow. Large crowds are hearing her, numerous conversions are reported and healings.

On Friday night Mrs. Pennington will tell the story of her life, from the time she, a country school teacher in Arkansas, became overnight a national beauty, then an actress on the stage, then a movie actress at Hollywood, her sudden conversion to Christianity and her call to preach the Gospel.

'TRAIL OF ABRAHAM,' DR. SHELTON'S TOPIC

Bible Lands Are Described in Tuesday Lectures at Mt. Vernon Place Church.

Dr. W. A. Shelton, pastor of Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church South, is an archaeologist of established reputation. That branch of science has been one of his main activities in life and he taught it for years in Emory University. His expeditions into Bible lands brought him into first-hand contact with all the work that has been done by all the archaeologists who have uncovered the monuments of the past and are still uncovering them.

Some of the knowledge this minister has gathered from long years of scholarly research and from personal exploration he has compressed into a series of lectures, illustrated with lantern slides and photographs. These lectures are being given at Mount Vernon Place Church in the Sunday School Auditorium. They are open to the public.

Told in Popular Way.

All students of the Bible all students of history, and all persons who wish to know something of the work of the chief branch of human history—for that is what archaeology has been called—will find much of value and a great deal of interest in this course of lectures. Dr. Shelton tells his story in a popular and pleasing way, much like a quiet round-table talk.

His deep learning and wide scholarship does not obtrude itself in any pedantic sort of manner. You feel when you hear him as if you were sitting out in the woods on one end of a log and he on the other and you were listening to a thrilling story of his adventures in far off lands.

In Abraham's Country.

The second of these lectures will be given next Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. It is entitled, "On the Trail of Abraham." Very recently archeologists have uncovered the City of Ur of the Chaldees, whence Abraham came, and in its ruins they found evidences of a civilization, the oldest so far known, which rather make our own age blush for shame.

Those old folks were not so backward as we might think. Even engineers and architects of our day are studying the ruins of Ur to find out how the engineers and architects of that ancient day built all those skyscrapers and aqueducts and waterworks, and so on and so on. Perhaps Dr. Shelton will throw some light on this in his lecture.

Red Cross Stamp Model Criticized

Johnston Avers Founder, Clara Barton, Deserves Wide Recognition.

(Associated Press.)

A statement characterizing Clara Barton, Red Cross founder, as "a classic illustration of the prophet without honor in her own house" was issued yesterday by Mercer C. Johnston, director of the People's Legislative Service.

Johnston attacked the Red Cross anniversary stamp to go on sale May 21 as carrying "instead of the historic features of Clara Barton, heroic founder, the pretty face of Marie Bard, a New York artist's model, dolled-up like a Red Cross nurse."

He criticized the lack of memorials to Miss Barton in Red Cross national headquarters, and mentioned Miss Mabel Boardman, secretary of the organization, as being "forced to give some sort of recognition" to Miss Barton in view of the fiftieth anniversary celebration.

PLANS FOR NIGHT AIR "RAID" CANCELED AFTER CRITICISM

Friday night and Saturday would be too heavy and that hence the night flight was canceled. Assistant Secretary of War F. Trubee Davison offered the same explanation.

During the last two weeks, the War Department has received a number of criticisms and protests against the maneuvers. Some came from pacifist organizations, officials said, and others from hospitals and such institutions which feared the noise of roaring motors would disturb patients. Gen. MacArthur was emphatic in denying, however, that these protests caused the cancellation. He explained he had not even seen the objections, most of which were sent to the adjutant general's office.

Gen. MacArthur, it was learned yesterday, will be in supreme command of the maneuvers, although Brig. Gen. Foulois will command in the air.

Officials were anxious to have it understood that yesterday's decision affected only the night bombardment attack on New York City next Friday night, and no other phase of the two weeks' air show. According to the War Department's official description of the night flight over New York, it was to have been a realistic affair. Thirty-six bombers flying in twelve units of three planes each, and forming a column almost a mile long, were to have taken off from Roosevelt Field at 10 p. m. Friday night. They were to have roared through the darkness to Governors Island and thence up the Hudson as far as Seventy-second street, where parachute flares were to be released, illuminating the city.

Then the bombers were to have headed toward Central Park and followed Broadway down to Times Square—the theater district, where thousands would be on the streets—and then head toward the East River, where more flares were to have been dropped.

Officials pointed out that the planes were to have flown at a height of 2,000 feet. From which altitude they might have landed in the East or Hudson Rivers in the event of motor failure, without endangering crowds below.

A preliminary ceremony will be staged by the Navy Department at the Bennett Airport in New York this morning, when nineteen Navy and Marine planes, including the famous "Red Devil" Squadron, will lend color to "prededication exercises."

Navy officials said that, although Floyd Bennett, famous aviator for whom the new Municipal Airport is named, was a member of the Navy, no Navy planes will be present at the actual dedication on May 23.

Fairfield Air Depot, Dayton, Ohio, May 15 (U.P.).—The winged forces of the United States Army were gathered here tonight, ready to begin their exercises in the annual Army air maneuvers, which will end next week with a theoretical attack upon the Eastern portion of the country.

More than 600 planes, representing the greatest potential fighting force ever massed in one place, were poised here and at Wright Field, a few miles away, for the preliminary training flights, which will be tomorrow. Only one or two groups had not arrived late today. There will be 672 planes in the aerial fleet when the maneuvers begin.

Row upon row of perfectly conditioned planes presented an arresting picture to the thousands who visited the air fields today. There were fast pursuit planes, sturdy attacking craft, huge bombers and observation planes.

The airport assumed an atmosphere of war time with a personnel of approximately 1,600 men working under war-time regulations. Actual combat conditions of feeding and housing are faced by the men. About one-sixth of the number are National Guard units.

Ambulances and fire-fighting equipment were held in readiness at strategic points, prepared to go into action at a moment's notice should there be an accident. Army officials said tonight there had been no serious mishaps at the field while the planes were gathering for the maneuvers, a significant record considering the large number of planes.

Collectors of Truth

A FEW years ago it was a frequent thing to meet persons who were making a collection of some sort. Perhaps it was of souvenir spoons from the various cities they had visited; or a collection of post cards from the different countries they had traveled through; or it was autographs or photographs of the prominent people they had chanced to see or hear. It was a wave that seemed to sweep over the entire country. Many people are still doing it, though not in quite so feverish a way.

Such people, as a rule, are delightful, and exceedingly well-informed along the line in which they are interested. One is quite willing to put up with fads and fancies of the enthusiastic collector so long as the things which they collect are of real value and genuine worth.

Let us apply this thought to the moral and spiritual realm.

Every individual is a collector of something. Man's brain is his workshop, and the thoughts he collects there guide and govern his life. The Miser is—for example—the result of a mind filled with the thought of money. The Criminal is the product of a mind stored with various thoughts. In life we come in contact with collectors of all sorts, but one of the most prevalent, and certainly one of the most trying, is the Grievance collector—the man who is always on the lookout for a slight or a hurt—usually with a large stock on hand which he is constantly adding to. Such collectors are never so happy as when they can air their troubles to any one who will listen.

How strange—and sad—it seems that any one should clutter the workshop of the brain with such thoughts. If one could but convince such individuals that most of their supposed insults were never meant, and few, if any, of the slights were intended, what a blessing it would be.

Every man is the collector of something. Ask yourself what it is. Examine the workshop of the brain, and the storeroom of the mind, and clear them of all unnecessary rubbish. Have pure thoughts and lofty purposes. Pray, as the Psalmist, who said:

"Create in me a clean heart, O God, and renew a right spirit within me."

BUILDING PLANNED FOR TWO CHURCHES

National Edifices Proposed by Congregationalists and Presbyterians.

Before many months have passed this city will be in the midst of a church-building program, for it is altogether probable that two great churches will soon start to work on their new edifices. One of them will be known as the National Presbyterian Church, and the other may not change its name, but still cling to the one it has long held—the First Congregational Church.

To insure the first project the Presbyterians of Washington have to raise only $350,000, which, with the funds now in sight, will make a foundation of $1,750,000. It is understood that the Congregational Church has most, if not all, of its building fund in sight. The only thing that is holding back the beginning of work is the sale of its property at Tenth and G streets.

Such things come almost unbidden, it would seem. When the Fourth Presbyterian Church was hesitating about its building program, because its property downtown was unsold, the pastor, Dr. James H. Miers, called a meeting of the church and told his people that if they really wanted to sell the property the way to do it was to ask God to sell it for them. Then he prayed earnestly for that very thing. In a day or two the property was sold, a buyer coming from a distance to buy it.

Offer Made for Church.

The National Presbyterian Church is faced with the same proposition, the sale of downtown property, now occupied by the Church of the Covenant. This, however, will be an easy sale to make. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, the minister of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church, said the other evening, at the dinner given in the interest of the National Church, that a real estate dealer had called on him to know when he could get possession of the property. His reply was: "Not until the Covenant congregation has a house to move into the very next day."

Both of these enterprises will be national in scope, whether they bear such a name or not. They will be the representative churches of their respective denominations, and they will in a measure typify the contribution that each denomination has made to the history and the making of this country. If this is fully carried out, each sanctuary would be a most interesting place to visit.

While it would probably scorn any suggestion that it can be labeled a political church, the Presbyterian Church has given to this Nation four great Presidents, several lesser ones, and one President who did not belong to any church worshiped with the Presbyterians, though his family had a Methodist bishop to preach his funeral.

The four great men were James Madison, born in a Presbyterian home, educated at Princeton, and himself an infidel, and his uncle, the Protestant Episcopal Bishop of Virginia; Andrew Jackson, sternly Presbyterian, the only one of our Presidents to build a chapel out of his own funds; Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson, both born in Presbyterian manses.

Among Lesser Presidents.

The lesser ones were James K. Polk, whose ancestry was Scotch Presbyterian, who married a Presbyterian wife, and who joined the Methodist Church on his deathbed; Franklin Pierce, James Buchanan and Benjamin Harrison.

Martin Van Buren and Theodore Roosevelt were members of the Dutch Reformed Church, a brand of Presbyterianism, to which Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, pastor of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, belonged.

Abraham Lincoln worshiped with his wife at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, almost as often as he went to church, which was not consistently; but numerous times he went to hear Methodist ministers, particularly his old Illinois friend, Bishop Matthew Simpson, who preached his funeral.

This is a goodly array of distinguished men that Presbyterianism has given to the Nation. Over against it the Congregational Church, so long confining its ministry to New England, has given the two Adamses and Calvin Coolidge, though John Quincy Adams was about as much of a Unitarian as he was Congregationalist.

When it comes to selecting a site for these new churches the rub arises, or whatever it is a rub does. The First Congregational Church is understood to be of the mind to continue as a downtown church. The National Presbyterian Church will probably go to the suburbs where land is not so expensive and where a large plot is available.

While the National Presbyterian Church will not be so costly a building as the Washington Cathedral or the National Shrine at the Catholic University, it will not be much exceeded in that regard by either. It is understood that it will be a rarely beautiful temple, following Gothic lines, and having a complete plant for all sorts of church work. As the Presbyterians throughout America are going to build it, they will want it to match their place in American history.

$10,950 Is Pledged At Petworth Church

More Is Expected Tomorrow at Ingathering of Methodists.

In two weeks the annual conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, known as the Baltimore Conference, will be in session, and Washington pastors are rounding up affairs for that meeting. They have to close the books before it convenes, prepare their reports and get ready to move. Technically, they move every year, for they are appointed for only one year, but may be reappointed year after year as long as they are acceptable and the bishop agrees.

One of the phases of the work that crowds in on these closing weeks is the making up of the budget for the coming year. In some of the churches—and this is largely true of city churches—this is done after laying plans and an intensive campaign, which is usually over in one day.

At the Petworth Church, which has had a rather remarkable awakening under its young pastor, Mr. Wood, the matter was handled on this wise. Mr. Wood got out two preliminary letters to his members; then the every-member canvass was put on, and now the pledges will be brought in. Last Sunday was the ingathering. Pledges were laid on the altar amounting to $7,800 for current expenses and $3,450 for benevolences. These were the voluntary offerings of those who were at church. The results of the canvass will be made known tomorrow, when the canvassers will lay the pledges they obtained on the altar in an impressive service.

Two Sunday Schools Will Merge Next Week

The annual congregational meeting of the St. Paul Lutheran Church was held on Thursday evening, at which time detailed reports of the condition and work of all organizations were heard, showing advancement along all lines. Arrangements are rapidly nearing completion for the moving of the congregation into the first unit of the new church at Connecticut avenue and Everett street.

Looking forward to this event, the boards of the two Sunday schools, which have been holding sessions at St. Paul's Church and Epiphany Chapel, will meet next week to effect a union of the two schools and elect officers for the merged organization.

Marriage and Home Survey Is Completed

The members of the four seminar sections of the young people's discussion group of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church have completed their four weeks' preliminary study and research in the six weeks' course on "Marriage and the Home" and will submit their tentative reports to the entire group tomorrow evening. During the next two weeks these reports will be considered in detail and compiled in a general report, which it is expected will be ready for publication in pamphlet form during the first week in June.

Mrs. Croxton to Address Young People's Forum

Mrs. Pereba Croxton, general secretary of the Washington Social Hygiene Society, will speak to the high school and college student members of the Young People's Forum of the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church tomorrow evening.

Her subject will be "The Adolescent Looks at Himself." A general discussion of the subject will follow Mrs. Croxton's address.

CATHEDRAL TO BEGIN EVEN-SONG SERVICE

Bishop Freeman to Preach at Peace Cross Tomorrow Afternoon.

The first People's Open Air Evensong at the Peace Cross in Washington Cathedral Close this season will take place tomorrow at 4 p. m., when the sermon will be preached by Bishop James E. Freeman. This service will be broadcast over Station WMAL.

For more than 30 years these open-air services have been held at the Peace Cross on pleasant Sunday afternoons from the Sunday after Ascension Day to Michaelmas, September 29. The public, as well as visitors in the city, is invited to attend these services, where a congregation of more than a thousand can easily be accommodated.

Two hundred members of the Episcopal Young People's Society in the Diocese of Washington will be present at this service tomorrow afternoon following a pilgrimage to the crypt chapels of the cathedral. Bishop Freeman is expected to deliver a sermon of special interest to the youth of the city.

In the event of rain the evensong service will be held in the Bethlehem Chapel at the same hour. Music at this service will be furnished by the cathedral choir.

At the 11 a. m. celebration of the Holy Communion tomorrow in the Bethlehem Chapel the sermon will be preached by the Rev. Dr. William L. DeVries, canon and precentor of Washington Cathedral.

The other services in the Bethlehem Chapel tomorrow will include celebration of the Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. and morning prayer and litany at 10 a. m.

The Rev. John W. Gummere, of the cathedral staff, will conduct two pilgrimages tomorrow to the cathedral crypt chapels and around the cathedral close. Both will start from the Bethlehem Chapel, the first at 12:30 p. m. and the second at 5:15 p. m.

THE POPE'S MESSAGE.

In the presence of thousands of worker pilgrims who yesterday thronged St. Peter's in Rome, Pope Pius XI made an observance of Pope Leo XIII's encylical on workers' rights and duties the occasion of a world-wide broadcast, giving a summary of a new encylical of his own shortly to be issued on the social and labor question.

The Pope is severe in his arraignment of Socialism, which boasts that it offers a remedy for the evils which afflict labor and industry. The socialistic remedy the Pope finds worse than the disease. Socialism, he says, "has split into two divisions: The first, which draws all the logical consequences, even the most extreme, from the principles of Socialism, has taken the name of Communism, and it is well known that its teachings can in no wise be reconciled with the teachings of the church. The other, which continues to be known as Socialism, has frequently and notably mitigated its program, * * * but it is not possible to be at once a good Catholic and a true Socialist."

As to present conditions, the Pope finds that "free and unbridled competition has been succeeded by the exaggerated concentration in the hands of the few of the whole economic power, not only of single nations, but of the whole world, and this concentration and this power degenerate into tyrannical despotism."

The only efficacious remedy for this disorder, Pius XI says, is a return to the sane principles of Christian social philosophy, and their prudent application to the end that all opposition between the classes cease and harmonious collaboration between the trade groups be established. To accomplish this he adjured his vast audience that it will be "absolutely necessary to reconstruct the whole economic system by bringing it back to the requirements of social justice so as to insure a more equitable distribution of the united proceeds of capital and labor."

A VERSATILE AMBASSADOR.

Salvador de Madariaga, the newly appointed Ambassador from the Spanish Republic to the United States, is on his way to Spain from Mexico for a conference with President Zamora and to have a look at the new order, whose coming he had predicted. Mr. de Madariaga's ship stopped over a few days in New York, and as he said he was not really an ambassador, but "a free man," he could talk of matters and events.

What he liked most about the overthrow of the monarchy was that "the whole thing was so clean, and a remarkable success for the democratic principle, as it was decided upon by what amounted to a plebiscite. The democratic faction imposed its majority will on the last government of the king in what was, in effect, a general election. And it must be remembered that the members of that last government were experts in—what shall we say?—doctoring elections."

The real issue, Mr. de Madariaga claims, was whether government was to be by force or by consent of the governed, and the Spanish people decided that it was to be by the latter system. Recent disorders the ambassador finds more a mob rising than a movement, ephemeral outbursts, unfortunate, but not grave. Dealing with various subjects frankly in a rapid fire of questions, Mr. de Madariaga's expressions may be briefly summarized:

"The people of America need not fear that Communism will become a force in the new Spain. The Spaniard is too individualistic. As well preach Communism to a New York banker as to the average Spaniard."

"Spain is as prepared for democracy as any other nation. Learning to conduct a democracy is much like swimming; one is likely to swallow a good deal of water at first."

"Democracy also is like marriage. To argue that democracy is a perfect form of government is like saying that marriage is a state of continual bliss. It isn't. Yet people still get married every day."

"We live in democracies because it is the only way of living. I am not an enthusiast over democracy, but I am a reasonable adept at it. It isn't because democracy is a perfect form of government that I believe in it, but because it is the only form that works."

"President Niceto Alcala Zamora is an extremely intelligent lawyer, a devout Roman Catholic, but he doesn't believe in mixing religion and politics. He is a liberal man of conservative leanings, not a reactionary."

"Whatever my personal preferences, I would like to see the influence of the Catholic Church, and of the Protestant churches, reduced. In Spain there is a large body of Catholic feeling and opinion that is important, and therefore it should be represented in the government. Otherwise, if we speak of democracy we are just talking moonshine."

Speaking to the International Students' Union later, the ambassador urged that more emphasis be placed on the education of youths' affections, emotions and natural reactions as a factor in world understanding. "Too much is made of the intellectual aspects of human beings," Mr. de Madariaga claims, "and although I am not opposed to the education of the intellect, the main point is to educate the emotions. Our present youth constitute the roots of the future and we must therefore, concentrate on the students' human qualities."

Some of the ambassador's remarks of former years, particularly those with regard to the American attitude toward the loss of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor, have been criticized, and when he closed his talk in New York he voiced the hope that his expressed opinions would "give no offense, cast no auspicions and permit no indiscretions."

BOOSTING SPECIAL INTERESTS.

The question as to how far the Government ought to go in promoting sales campaigns for some industries is raised by a protest against "national cotton week." In behalf of a woolen manufacturer Senator Morrow and Representative Segar, of New Jersey, have laid complaints before the Departments of Agriculture and Commerce against their participation in this campaign to extend the use of cotton.

The cotton and woolen industries are rivals. A campaign in the interests of one may work to the disadvantage of the other, even though that other may not be mentioned. If the Government is going to sponsor a national cotton week, it must in fairness promote a national woolen week. Every branch of the textile industry might claim the right of similar treatment. Then every branch of every other industry would be demanding that the Government conduct a sales campaign for its benefit. Uncle Sam would be transformed into a sideshow barker.

It is true that the Department of Commerce was organized for the purpose of aiding business and the Department of Agriculture to promote the welfare of farming. The question at issue is what constitutes assistance to commercial and agricultural interests in general, and what amounts to discrimination in favor of one industry to the detriment of others. The Government ought not to be placed in the position of fostering any special interests. There is no excuse for Federal departments participating in a sales campaign where rival American interests are involved. It seems quite proper for the departments to furnish information and data that would be useful to private interests. But unless the departments are strictly impartial they will impair their own usefulness.

AMERICAN ART.

Recent reports from Paris state that the exodus of American students and artists due to the present depression in the United States has been felt in scholastic and artistic quarters. It may seem that the homecoming of these artists will mean a serious loss to them, yet it is a question whether it might not, on the contrary, work for benefit in many cases. America has much to profit by study and contact with European methods, but it must not underestimate its own remarkable strides in this field.

Henri Matisse, during his visit to America, remarked: "An American artist should learn his metier, develop his faculties and work in America. Let him go to Paris for occasional visits, but an American artist should express America." The very freshness of the subjects on this side of the Atlantic, this great painter believed, should stimulate the imagination of the native artist. Yet the American people as a whole do not realize that not only have they an undeveloped field for art, but that their painters rank among the greatest in the world today. The French sculptor, Rodin, said, "There is now going on in America a renaissance more important than that of the fifteenth century in Europe, only the Americans do not know it." This statement came as a surprise to most persons.

Every year wealthy patrons of art go to Europe with the intention of buying masterpieces. Most of these collectors fail to appreciate the value of artists at home. They still wait for Europe to make reputations for American artists as it has done in the past.

George Inness, one of America's greatest painters, was little esteemed in this country until Benjamin Constant called attention to his genius and immediately boosted his reputation and prices. It was then only that he came into his own among his countrymen.

After the stimulus of European appraisals, returning artists may discover in their own country a field more important than they now realize.

BOYS OUT OF SCHOOL.

One economic maladjustment which has been given little attention during the depression period is pointed out by the Federal Office of Education. Its survey shows that the number of boys who are holding jobs instead of attending school is considerably larger than the army of unemployed. These boys earn each year at least $5,000,000,000, which is more than twice as much as the cost of all public education in the United States.

In New York it was found that boys from 14 to 18 years of age, 65,000 in number, were earning an average of nearly $740 each. If that average can be applied to the country as a whole it means that approximately 6,700,000 boys under 18 years of age are employed on regular full-time jobs. They are earning small salaries now and depriving themselves of the training that would equip them to take their proper place in the business and industrial world later on. It would be interesting to know how many of these lads are kept from school because the breadwinner of the family has no job.

The inconsistency of allowing millions of schoolboys to work and neglect their education while several million able-bodied men are hunting employment is apparent to every one. But the problem is not simple. In many cases these boys are forced to work to support themselves and to assist in supporting the families of which they are members. In other cases the maladjustment is merely a matter of inadequate laws compelling attendance at school, or perhaps lax enforcement of those laws. So long as social organization remains as it is some boys will find it necessary to assume the responsibilities of breadwinner before they reach maturity, but a great deal of this sacrifice of youth could be avoided. States that are afflicted with unemployment would do well to check up on the unnecessary employment of youths who have not acquired the fundamentals of education.

EXIT THE CLASSICS.

Latin and Greek will not longer be a requisite for entrance to Yale. Following this action taken by President Angell and the fellows of the university, it will now be possible to substitute modern languages for the classics in securing a bachelor of arts degree. Student opinion is reflected in the Yale Daily News editorial which rejoices that the faculty has recognized "the absurdity of awarding academic honors on the presumption that the classics were without peer in the development of the intellect."

It is hardly feared, even by the most ardent classicist, that the elimination of Latin and Greek will stop intellectual growth. This loss is not to be reckoned solely in mental processes as such, for any study that requires concentration will develop the mind. There is, however, such a thing as the personal pleasure and broadening influence of scholarship found only in the classics. Many boys would profit by this contact were not the preparatory schools now adjusting their curricula to meet the new requirements.

The colleges have let down the bars of entrance requirements and opened vocational schools to train those who do not aspire to be intellectuals, or who seek training in a money-making business. These departments are valuable, and fill an important need. They would be commendable as trade schools, but they have lamentably pulled down the standing of the colleges and universities. President Butler of Columbia recently made the statement that probably no student in Columbia today could satisfactorily pass the examination tests of admission of 50 years ago.

This new age has made new problems in education which have not as yet been satisfactorily solved. We have lost some of the best of the old traditions without finding compensating substitutes. The new experiments in such colleges as Chicago, Rollins and Colgate, which seek to develop the student along the line best suited to him, may prove of great value. The development of the best that is in a man, rather than the moulding of the man to a standard, should be the objective, whether the instruction be in the classics or in practical vocations.

CALVIN COOLIDGE SAYS:

Northampton, Mass., May 15.—Some friends of France and well-wishers for peace, stability and prosperity in Europe will be disappointed that Briand was defeated in his effort to be president. That sentiment does not involve any criticism of the man who was elected, but is based on the feeling that Briand was a great influence for better international understanding and good will. His defeat seems to be a repudiation by the French government of his foreign policies and a resurgence among the French people of the spirit of intense and suspicious nationalism which they have regretted in others.

Before becoming altogether pessimistic it is well to await developments. Sometimes fate takes charge of a situation in unexpected ways. The election of Hindenburg brought a similar reaction. It is now apparent that his force of character and loyalty have supported the republic in a way impossible by a pronounced liberal. The world prestige of Briand has not suffered, but increased. When he has asked his government for a vote of confidence in his policies he has had it. He will be supported by these influences at Geneva. France, moreover, has a marvelous way of recovering herself.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

KENTUCKY DERBY

From the Cincinnati Enquirer.

The greatest race in the world is the topic of the hour—the fifty-seventh running of the Kentucky Derby—as much talked of by lovers of great, clean sport in London, Paris, Buenos Aires, as in Cincinnati, New York, Los Angeles. Horses become idealizations; jockeys receive the deference of emperors. Bugle notes, the roar of multitudes, the blare of music, the parade of matchless thoroughbreds distinguish a colorful picture not to be rivaled on earth.

The present promises to be the greatest Derby ever run, for at historic Churchill Downs on May 16 will be gathered not merely the great horses from East and West but valiant contenders from North and South as well. Special trains from Cincinnati and every city of importance in the land will contribute to the vast gathering of lovers of the sport of kings.

Romance, tradition, thrills—the Derby. Rain or shine, it will repeat its classic story. Senators, governors, bankers, scientists, business men—America—will be there; and lovers of a horse and clean sport from lands across the sea. Who will win is the question and the problem of the gathering thousands. Memories of other days will rise in the minds of many. The great name of Spokane, who defeated Proctor Knott, will be recalled; that of Omar Khayyam, the only foreign horse ever to win the Derby; of Black Gold, of Gallant Fox. Behave Yourself and other splendid royal equines men will think, and make comparisons.

There is always uncertainty in the outcome of any race between worthy contenders, but statistics show that favorites in the past have won approximately 45 per cent of them. Quite often, however, a new king of the turf leaps to fame to the surprise, and to the consternation, of many. This is why the enchantment of racing holds—this and the fact that there is no nobler, more soul-stirring sight in all the world than is afforded by the heroic striving of horses of imperial prowess and lineage.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE SEED OF GREATNESS.

This said the seed: "I'll never see
The lovely flower that is to be.
I am the life, and yet I die
A bit of beauty to supply.
From me a lovely thing shall grow
Which I shall never live to know."

This said his friend: "It is too bad;
He never knew the wealth he had.
He toiled for years. Now to his name
A noble son brings lustrous fame.
But he has gone and can not know
The joy which would have cheered him so."

What small philosophy is this
Which holds in self lies every bliss?
Shall seeds inert and lifeless be
Because the blooms they'll never see?
And man not wish his son to grow
To heights which he may never know?

I think 'twere better far indeed
Of manliness to be the seed
Than be the bloom itself and fade
A victim of the cutter's blade.
Come death or not, I hope I can
Be father of a greater man!

Another Letter From a Bald-Headed Dad to His Flapper Daughter.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

MY DEAR LOUISE—Do you know what life is composed of?

It is composed of time.

You inherited a certain measure of time—nobody knows just how much—and that is your fortune.

You can spend it wisely and get the worth of it, or you can spend it foolishly and cheat yourself.

The true cost of anything—a house, a frock, a bit of knowledge—is determined by the amount of time you give in exchange for it.

If you should labor ten years to get a house, you would be cheated. No house is worth that much of anybody's life.

You are planning to spend four more years of your life in school. That, according to life insurance tables, is about one-fifteenth of your remaining capital.

That is a great price to pay for anything, and I want you to be sure that you know what you are buying.

I have talked with numbers of college girls who said in effect: "All I want is my 'dip.'"

They weren't eager to learn anything. They had no thirst for education. All they hoped to do was memorize enough meaningless jargon to survive their examinations and eventually receive a beribboned roll of paper bearing false witness to their degree of knowledge.

They seemed content to make that kind of bargain, but it seems to me that four years of precious time is a big price to pay for a piece of imitation sheepskin.

If I were you, and didn't want an education, I'd quit right now and spend that four years for something worth while.

There are very few things in this world worth more than an education, and by spending four years to get one you can equip yourself to get much more pleasure and satisfaction out of the years that follow.

But there isn't any value in a diploma that doesn't tell the truth, and there is no profit in the kind of "education" got by cramming for tests, cheating and bluffing instructors and memorizing things you don't understand or wish to understand.

Perhaps you are getting your money's worth and will have no regret. I don't mean to insinuate anything.

I am merely warning you to keep you from cheating yourself as so many others do. People who pay too much for anything are called "suckers." Four years is a big price. Only a simpleton would pay that much for a class ring and a sorority pin. Love, DAD.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

A Confession of Failure.

Minneapolis Tribune.

Sale of 15,000,000 bushels of Government wheat last Saturday to a private exporting syndicate was practical admission by the Farm Board that the grain trade itself was able to export grain more economically and efficiently than any governmental agency. As the Chicago Tribune puts it:

"Here is another proof of the incompetence of the Government to engage in business requiring great initiative and ready adaptability to fluctuating circumstances. The Government, of course, found no difficulty in buying all the wheat in sight for more than it was worth; but when the Farm Board was obliged to unload, another and far more difficult problem arose. The Government has now discovered that it is impossible to extemporize an efficient selling organization, particularly at a moment such as this, when there is no shortage in the world of the commodity to be sold."

Certain it is that the Farm Board's agencies did their best to do their own wheat selling in Europe, before turning to private exporters. Faced with the task of getting rid of 35,000,000 bushels before the end of June, the Government had been able to sell only 8,000,000 bushels abroad in March and April. Hence the necessity of calling for help from that same private grain trade which the Farm Board once set out to abolish.

Cussing the Legislature.

Soft-Pedaling Dry Repeal.

Houston Post-Dispatch.

The fact that such outstanding wets as former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, and Senator-elect James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, have refused to put in with Chairman John J. Raskob in attempting to make prohibition repeal the paramount plank in the Democratic platform in 1932 has occasioned wide-spread comment.

It is significant that most of those who a year ago were the loudest in agitation of a demand for repeal of the eighteenth amendment, have become less insistent that the issue be put to the fore, as the 1932 contest approaches. Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, was one of the members of the Wickersham commisison who favored repeal of the amendment, and yet Mr. Baker is known to have expressed sentiments lately that remove him definitely from any possibility of being classified as a militant wet.

Tilson for Speaker.

Lewisburg (Pa.) Saturday News.

Congressman Tilson, of Connecticut, for Speaker of the House, sounds sane, sensible and conservative, as well as representative of the Republican party and the country. He has had long experience as a legislator, is able and affable, and is the kind of man who would make a good President.

Coolidge was one of our best Chief Executives because he was conservatively positive and had experience in public life. Tilson has had experience in Congress, where most of our able Presidents acquire theirs and where the light of statesmanship came to Clay, Webster, Cass, Blaine and a long line of great men who were not Presidents but whose reflected genius shines across the pages of the Nation's history from its inception until now.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

United States Will Not Open Market to Low-Paid Labor Products While Europe Piles Up Armaments.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: National and international trade should be encouraged by the removal of every obstacle possible. Thus resolutes the International Chamber of Commerce, just adjourned.

Observe that this pronouncement refers to both national and international trade. The former is aimed directly at the United States, and its implication is that we should scrap all our antitrust laws, and those against monopolies, and our Government agencies for the regulation of public service corporations, so that the predatory and conscienceless interests may be free to exploit the public to their hearts' content.

The reference to international trade and removal of obstacles to its universal freedom is intimately connected with tariffs, and is aimed primarily at the United States. Europe, with her slave wages, low standards of living, and consequent underconsumption of her products, wants the United States to let down the bars and open its vast markets to their wares produced by pauperized labor, and in this we find her supported by a despicable class of American manufacturers, who have opened branch factories in those countries to get the benefit of the low wages there prevailing for skilled labor.

The purpose of the whole scheme is, too self-evident to deceive any intelligent American.

So long as Europe pauperizes its labor with low wages, and thereby enforces standards of living among them unfit for animals, just so long will the United States protect the high wages of her workers and the superior standards of living and decency among them by tariff duties to preserve our domestic markets against the flood of European goods produced under such conditions.

In the final analysis the leaders of Europe are alone responsible for their own troubles. They keep the masses in economic slavery, and tax them to death to maintain armaments in preparation for wars which their own selfishness and ineptitude make periodically inevitable. Today they are spending five billions on armaments and keeping under arms more men than before the recent World War, thereby withdrawing this vast sum from productive enterprises and crushing the life out of their peoples by taxation to raise it.

Furthermore, instead of going to work, which is the chief remedy for their condition, they spend their time trying to get something for nothing, and looking to Uncle Sam to continue to be their fairy godfather.

As counter to the advice they are constantly giving the people of these United States, it would not seem improper to tell them to stop thinking and talking so much about war; and that their difficulties can only be met by self-reliance, honest work, and each nationality minding its own business, and thereby making unnecessary the vast armaments that are being maintained. A. S. LANIER.

Tablet for Arlington to Be Placed Near Fort Myer Gate, Bearing Noble Inscription.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A few days since the writer made a suggestion to you that the old arch over the Fort Myer gate to Arlington be replaced or another provided. The office of the quartermaster general permits the use of the following quotation: "The arch originally over the Fort Myer gate, referred to by you, can not be located. To cast another arch bearing the portion of the poem referred to is not practicable, as present plans do not contemplate another entrance there. Therefore, the best plan would be to display the stanza on a tabloid suitably placed within the cemetery. A tablet bearing the stanza is available in Arlington National Cemetery and instructions have been given to place it in the cemetery a short distance from the Fort Myer gate on the main roadway leading to the mansion."

It was also learned at that office that all of the national cemeteries are provided with tablets on which this beautiful quatrain is inscribed:

"On Fame's eternal camping ground
Their silent tents are spread,
And Glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

Since the order has been given for the placing of this tablet in Arlington visitors may now be grateful for the display of this general and generous tribute. When the eastern front of Arlington is completed and the marble gateway is erected a further display may be hoped for. The writer is confident that many will join him in thanking Gen. DeWitt for his prompt response.

ARTHUR GIBSON MORSE.

Danger That the Mall May Be Turned Into Public Garage and Filling Station.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The District authorities are having a tough time just now trying to figure out the problem of parking space for Government clerks when they are all rounded up in the Federal triangle. Whatever may be done, I hope the Mall will be spared. Already it has been pointed out that the White House Ellipse is well situated and should be made use of for a parking reservation. My own idea is that the only way out is to provide underground as well as basement garages, or else require the clerks to go to and from their work by public conveyance as they did formerly.

But what I fear is that this time a niggardly plea for economy may be strong enough to change the magnificent Mall into an automobile storage, gasoline-station eyesore. My hope is that the influence of those who have its best interests at heart will be sufficient to hold in check all attempts of traffic experts to encroach on the cherished beauty spots of the National Capital. SAVE THE MALL.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Capital Boy Is Honored by Yale Society

Douglas MacArthur 2d Is "Tapped" to Join Famous Wolf's Head.

A SLAP on the shoulder, a nod of the head and hurried footsteps that lead from the Yale campus to a room of collegiate atmosphere and presto! Douglas MacArthur 2d, of Washington, joins the mystic circle of men chosen to one of the four societies at the famous university during "tap day." It all happened on Thursday, the day of days at Yale, Jonah-day for hundreds of college youth but one of distinction for those selected to "Skull and Bones," "Scroll and Key," "Wolf's Head" or "Elihu."

Mr. MacArthur, who is the son of Mrs. Arthur MacArthur, of Kalorama road, and nephew of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, was chosen to "Wolf's Head." He was one of 60 members of the junior class picked out by the seniors for the honor.

Another Yale unior widely known in Washington and named to one of the societies was Mr. Larned Donaldson Randolph, of Keene, Va., who "went Elihu."

"Tap day" at Yale, significant throughout the country as the focal day of spring at the university, brings to the shaded areas beneath the campus elms, several hundred men who are members of the college junior class. From the large group each fraternity selects fifteen men to "carry on" after their own graduation. Working silently and with decisive speed, fraternity members slip through the assembled groups "tapping" their chosen men with orders to repair to their rooms. If the selected candidate accepts the nomination he obeys; if he rejects the proffered honor, he remains on the campus.

At the exercises on Thursday Mr. Herster Barres, of Bethlehem, Pa., end on the football team for two years and a member of the track team, was given what is generally considered the highest honor by being the last man tapped for "Skull and Bones" Society. Mr. Richard Storrs Childs, of Norfolk, Conn., was chosen a member of the "Scroll and Keys," despite his condemnation of "Tap Day" in the Harkness Hoot, a new Yale undergraduate publication. Thirteen men refused elections to accept others.

Young MacArthur generally spends his vacations in Washington and is one of the popular young members of the Chevy Chase Club, where he passes a great deal of time while in town. He is on the football squad at Yale, and is a devotee of tennis.

Mr. Stimson Goes To Summer Home.

The Secretary of State, Mr. Henry L. Stimson, has gone to New York to join Mrs. Stimson in their summer home on Long Island for the week-end. Mrs. Edwin G. Kintner, wife of Capt. Kintner, U. S. N., entertained at a small tea yesterday afternoon for her cousin, Mrs. George W. Waring, who has been visiting in Washington for the past week, and has been a member of the house party given by Mr. William Phelps Eno. Mrs. Waring will pass the week-end with Capt. and Mrs. Kintner.

Mrs. John Enochs, wife of Capt. Enochs, of the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, and formerly Miss Elizabeth Shirley, will be the guest in whose honor Miss Grace Abbott will give a tea from 5 until 7 o'clock on Sunday, May 24.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Woodward, who have arrived in Washington from Hongkong, China, will be at Wardman Park Hotel during their stay here.

Elkins, of Elkins Park, Chestnut Hills, to Mr. Harry B. Hollins 3d, of New York. The ceremony will take place in St. Paul's Church.

Maj. and Mrs. Louis Pendleton entertained at dinner at the Shoreham Hotel last evening in compliment to Mrs. Pendleton's mother, Mrs. Charles Platt, of San Francisco, who has been their house guest for several weeks, and will return to California early in June.

The guests were Col. and Mrs. S. C. Vestal, Col. and Mrs. Henry Spencer Merrick, Col. and Mrs. Charles R. Alley, Maj. and Mrs. R. D. Newman and Mrs. Newman's mother, Mrs. Shields; Mrs. L. G. Miller and Maj. W. J. Calvert.

Following the Georgetown pilgrimage so closely, the Flower Show demonstrates the garden activities of old Georgetown.

THE other night during an air interview, Irvin S. Cobb remarked that "until you go to Kentucky and with your own eyes behold the Derby, 'you ain't never been nowheres and you ain't never seen nothing.'"

Mr. Cobb might have added that the next best thing to witnessing the race would be listening to a good description of it. Listeners have their choice of announcers and networks this afternoon (WRC, WMAL, 5:45 p. m.).

The NBC will offer a short talk by Vice President Charles F. Curtis on the 57th running of the Derby, with announcers Earl Sande, Clem McCarthy, and Graham McNamee. Edgar Horn, a nationally known turf expert, will work with Ted Husing, for CBS.

English racing fans will hear the NBC radio report through a rebroadcast by short wave transmitter from WGY, Schenectady.

ALTHOUGH most people are not aware that woodwind instruments, such as the oboe and clarinet, mellow with age quite as much as the violin or cello, Ted Lewis shows his acquaintance with the fact by his fidelity to a rich-toned clarinet he bought in Roanoke, Va., twenty years ago.

Ted now has fourteen clarinets, some purchased, some given to him, but the one with which he leads his broadcast each Saturday night (WRC, 6:30) is the battered instrument, its plating and polish long gone, with which he entered "big time."

Lewis will sing "Donna Clara," "Lonesome Road" and "Walkin' Around in a Dream" during the broadcast tonight.

Erno Rapee will replace Walter Damrosch as the conductor of the GE Symphony Orchestra for this summer, beginning tonight (WRC, 8). Dr. Damrosch will return to the hour next fall.

STATION NAA, at Arlington, received the following letter from a Baltimore fan, after the last broadcast from the Pan American Union:

"I wish to compliment you upon your fine transmission of the Pan American concert. The annoying hum, so noticeable on previous occasions, was entirely absent. You had, in fact, a better signal than either WRC, WEAF or WGY."

NAA broadcasts the entire concert each time, the network stations being able to take only a portion, because the rest of the time is previously contracted for.

With his repertoire of Scotch character songs, Sandy MacFarlane will move onto WRC's wave length in a new series of programs, tonight, 8:30.

The Mount Vernon Choral Society—fifty voices under the direction of Edgar Fowlston—will be heard in a 30-minute recital today (WRC, 1:30 p. m.).

Anthony Wons, who conducted Tony's Scrapbook, has broadcast more than 2,000 times in the past seven years, but the forthcoming Camel series will mark his first sponsor appearance.

INSTALLATION of the CBS experimental television station atop the studios at 485 Madison avenue, New York, has begun following tests given the apparatus during the past month. Four rooms have been constructed in which the transmitter, control apparatus, studio and scanner will be located.

When Rudy Vallee begins his stage appearances with White's "Scandals" this summer, his weekly income will be about $12,000.

Ben Alley's tenor voice is heard in ten programs each week.

Featured monologist on the series heard regularly Saturday nights (WMAL, 7:30 p. m.) Elsie Mae Gordon is now pinch-hitting for Georgia Backus in the Henry-George sketches, while the latter is on vacation. In addition, she is Maybelle in the "Show Boat" period.

LILY PONS, whose voice loses none of its charm through the microphone, came to America two years ago for an audition with the Metropolitan Opera, but was sent back to Italy for another period of study.

Dan O'Nese INTERPRETS the MODE

New York, May 15.

I'M telling you, summer resort underwear is a problem! Look at the not-too-lovely ladies on any of the world's beaches. Nice, Cannes, Juan Les Pins, Deauville—and don't look too hard or too long! For the chances are that you can see right through them. Not that the single piece garment can't be charming, as when it is worn in "Mother Hubbard" fashion in the South Seas—but a gingham or calico housedress isn't quite the same thing, in Biarritz, you know.

Yet they will, the sweet young things—wear nothing at all and claim that it is healthy. Without wanting to take the trouble to find out if there isn't some other way around the question—which there is, you see.

For lucky modern women have millions of people thinking for them, literally millions! Couturieres, designers, manufacturers, fashun crickets like me—why, there isn't a single thing that a lovely lady needs or wishes for her loveliness that she can't find between us! And summer lingerie is no new problem—summers have always been summers, ladies, and lingerie a necessity to the latter. And there is lingerie on the market that one can buy, made especially for wearing under summer dresses, made of the most heat-shedding materials, in the most comfortable styles. You have but to shop around a bit and ask to see comfortable underwear for summer, to appreciate how lucky you are to be living in a day, age and country where every need has an answer!

And you can look at the summer lingerie, all in one piece and answering all requirements, the lovely lady is wearing in the illustration today, if you don't believe me! For I have designed that way of getting around the summer lingerie question for myself—and all you have to do is to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for the illustrated leaflet telling you how to make it, and comfort is yours! If you don't sew, turn the leaflet over to your dressmaker—who has never thought of such a chic and practical way to be comfortable in the summer, I am certain. How about getting that envelope ready before you forget it? And oh, yes, there is a long underskirt for backless dresses, too—that fastens around the waist as grandmother's once did—that's just the thing for either daytime or evening dresses.

• • • •

As to the materials for this type of lingerie, there are some lovely artificial silks on the market that one should see—because they have more desirable features than real silk as to heat shedding and nonmussing. Also the fine silken broadcloth, nainsook, and a new kind of linen especially for underwear.

• • • •

We have only a scant handful of our coat, scarf and beret leaflet left. You wouldn't wonder if you saw what a really delightful coat it is—not to mention its chic accessories! Today is your very last chance to send your stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Dare department of The Washington Post for it!

• • • •

Jot it down now in your memory—the weekly Dare fashion letter will appear again tomorrow in The Sunday Washington Post. And we know you'll enjoy it.

Au Revoir.

—FRANCES M'DONALD—

Back to the Highway.

Dear Frances McDonald: If you were 26 years old, well-born and well-raised and had for two years thrown yourself away upon a man you believed worth the sacrifice of friends, your place in a worthwhile circle and your claim to the respect of your fellow beings, and then that man in justification of his abandonment of you, told you that if you had been "any kind of a woman" you would never have done what you did—would you consider it worth the effort to go on living or would you complete the picture with a fade-out to a happier world? He is to be married next month—after swearing to me that our love was marriage enough for him and we would be together for always. I can not think of the future, of days that will come and go without him, of the years that stretch ahead. It is easier to think of peace. I have nothing to live for. My employer who knows of my tragedy, has offered me a leave of absence and I feel like making it a final leave of life. Would you consider my future worth living?

ELLEN.

Listen, Ellen, your future is as worthwhile as you make it—and looks to me a lot healthier than your past. Since you have put me in your place, I can not help telling you that personally I would a lot rather think of days that would come and go, without than with such accompaniment as the brand of companionship such a character could offer. Personally, too, I would a lot rather find my mistake at 26 than at 46. And would rather be free to find a new life than married to such a man and perhaps even the mother of a few children to inherit his baseness. You have nothing to regret in his loss, however you may regret your past association. He will undoubtedly treat his wife in equally infamous manner. Thousands of men abandon legally married wives in this land of the free every year, and without reason or excuse except that they no longer feel like bearing the responsibilities of marriage. So even marriage means nothing to such men.

What you want to do, and do swiftly, is accept the fact that you are a poor judge of men and have pinned a medal on what looked to you like a hero—but was not. Once you admit that he is no loss, your battle will be half won. It is only while you still cling to the belief that you have lost something worth having that you will continue to mourn. Once accept the fact of his depravity and you will cease to regard as a calamity whatever turn of fate rescued you from a most unwholesome mode of life. You know, Ellen, there is a sound reason for every law laid down for woman. And the chief reason for the ban on such unions as yours, is the fact that decent men do not enter into them. Simple—is it not? So, seeing things as they really are, I suggest you tell the employer that instead of a leave of absence, you would like a little more work to do.

One year from today you will be a new woman, wiser and more sure for all this turmoil. It is only while the storm is breaking that the end of the world seems at hand. The morrow shines the fresher for the storm. Will you let me hear from you again?

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"TAURUS."

IF May 16 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:10 a. m. to 11:20 a. m., from 2:05 p. m. to 3:35 p. m. and from 5:30 p. m. to 7:10 p. m. The only danger period is from noon to 1:50 p. m.

The morning of May 16 will be productive of some change, which will inure to your benefit, although the results may not be immediate. The afternoon and evening will be full of perplexities and misgivings. Do not let them worry you, and do not deviate from accustomed routine!

A child born on this May 16 will be original, impulsive and imperious. It will want its own way in everything it does or undertakes. It will possess a good brain, which will only need training in order to insure success. It will love secrecy, and everything mysterious will make an appeal to it.

Born on May 16, you are full of energy and "pep," forceful and compelling. You look down on easy jobs, and are at your best when called upon to clear up a situation, or solve a problem, that is beyond the capabilities of others. You are a clear thinker, and shrewd reasoner. Your methods, too, are your own. You refuse to be guided by convention or usage. You diagnose very carefully any situation with which you are confronted, and then do not prescribe, but apply, the remedies. Your treatment is generally very effective. If the area of your work is ever large enough for your proper development, you will become a great success. The only factor that can restrain you is the limitations imposed by others.

Your nature is sympathetic and your disposition affectionate. No matter how great the calls on your time may be for other interests, the home always occupies first place in your regard. More than anything else it produces the motive power for your efforts. In view of your strong characteristics, and your original way of thinking, you should work alone, or only associate yourself with those who are willing to carry out your instructions and do things "in your way."

Levi P. Morton, Vice President of The United States.

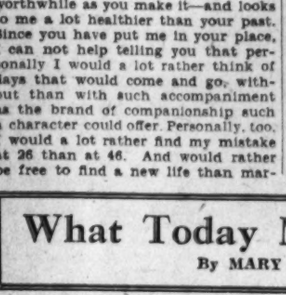
WORK ON BRIDGE



WITH the above hand, played at No Trump, Clubs were led originally and South held up his Ace until the third round, thereby exhausting East of Clubs.

South led a Heart to trick 4, winning with the Ace in dummy; a Diamond was led next and finessed when the finesse won, with the Ace and leading another Diamond for a second finesse. Winning this finesse, South led the Ace of Diamonds, capturing the adverse King. But after that he only won with his two Kings and failed to score three-odd.

Do you see Declarer's error?

The Correct Play.

When Declarer won the third trick with the Ace of Clubs, he should see that getting into dummy to finesse Diamonds twice would make only eight tricks with the finesses succeeding; because dummy contains no entry and could not be put in a third time to cash the Diamonds which probably would be established by the two finesses.

If West, who has shown that he has the two remaining Clubs, has the King of Diamonds, he will save game with the Diamond finesse tried as above; if East has the King of Diamonds, game can be made if Declarer puts dummy in position to cash its long Diamonds.

After the Ace of Clubs South should lead the Ace of Diamonds, following it with the Queen and (if that wins) with the Jack. Putting dummy in with one of his Aces to lead a Diamond for a finesse, and then leading out the Ace and Queen of Diamonds probably would accomplish the same purpose; but that scheme would fail if West had the King of Diamonds solus, or if East had the King and three other Diamonds.

The game is assured by the method described, unless West has the King and another Diamond with his two long Clubs, and with the cards divided in that way no method of play would succeed. Played as advised, supposing the King of Diamonds takes the fifth trick and East leads either major suit, dummy will have plenty of entries to make his long Diamonds, and Declarer will take two Spades, two Hearts, four Diamonds and one Club.

Capital Group Completes Plans for Flower Exhibit

Dahlia and Iris Society Arranges to Hold Show at Carlton Hotel Next Tuesday and Wednesday; Prizes to Be Awarded.

Plans for staging a spring iris and flower show at the Carlton Hotel on May 19 and 20 under the auspices of the National Capital Dahlia and Iris Society have been completed by that organization. Mrs. Milton B. Payne, president of the society, announced that the show which will be given in cooperation with the American Iris Society, will be open to any to exhibit and compete for the prizes offered.

Fifty-four classes of flowers are provided for in this year's schedule, which is being distributed to hundreds of amateur flower growers in Washington and adjacent communities in Maryland and Virginia.

In the iris classes, of which there are 23, the exhibitor winning the most first and second prize points, other than the silver medal winner, will be awarded the bronze medal. Three awards will be made to exhibitors in each of the classes specified in the schedule.

In the iris classes provision has been made for exhibits in thirteen groups where competition is open to both large and small exhibitors; another group of exhibits is provided for calling for a collection of 50 or more varieties, collections of 25, 12 and 6 distinct varieties, respectively, and exhibitors in these classes will be excluded from competing with the amateur growers in a third class where prizes are offered for collections of 10 distinct varieties, one stalk each; collections of 5 distinct varieties, three stalks each, and exhibits of single stalks, each classified according to 15 color combinations.

A special class has been provided calling for the award of a certificate of honorable mention by the American Iris Society for iris raised from seed by the exhibitor, but not yet introduced to commerce.

Peonies, always a popular flower at shows, have been amply provided for in twelve classes, which call for exhibits of collections of not more than six varieties; collections of seven to twelve named varieties; a group calling for three blooms to a vase, in shades of light pink; dark pink; red and white, respectively. A sweepstakes prize is offered forone specimen bloom, double or single, representing the best flower in the show.

Collections of Japanese varieties, singles, seedlings and for a vase, bowl or basket of peonies complete the peony groups.

Prizes are offered for the most artistically arranged basket of hardy garden flowers, iris predominating; likewise for a bowl artistically arranged, iris not predominating; for the best collection of perennials, six or more kinds, each kind in a separate container; for the most artistically arranged vase of perennials, and for the best vase of flowering shrubs.

Fourteen classes were added to the schedule this year to care for the rose exhibits, which may be one bloom to a vase in red, crimson, white, yellow and pink shades, respectively; best vase, large and small; best basket of roses, large and small, and for best collection of roses. Similar classes were provided for sprays of climbing roses three feet or more in length in shades of pink, white, red and yellow.

The twenty garden clubs within 30 miles of Washington in Virginia and Maryland will compete for a silver trophy offered through the American Horticultural Society in a class calling for an exhibit of hardy flowers arranged for effect. The first organization winning this trophy three times will be entitled to permanent ownership. The Hyattsville Horticultural Society won the prize in 1929 and the Montgomery Suburban Garden Club received the award in 1930.

Mrs. Edna M. Reinohl, of Riverdale, Md., is chairman of the exhibition, who has charge of the distribution of the exhibition schedules.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

IS bone meal a good fertilizer for all plants? Can I use it with good results on ferns, snake plants, rubber plants, African violets, aspidistra, also potted daffodils that I am anxious to have in bloom in the next ten days? Should I use it on outside bulbs that are growing in the open? I covered them with manure and peat moss in the fall. They have finished blooming, but did not do as well as I expected. Would bone meal in April have helped them any?

NO SIGNATURE.

Bone meal is a splendid fertilizer, but you must be sure your plants require food before giving them any fertilizer. It is a good food for the plants listed. It will not help your daffodils, which are about to bloom after the buds are formed. In this case liquid manure will be more rapidly absorbed. There is no necessity for fertilizing in April bulbs which are growing in the open, as the time to feed them is in the fall when you are planting them. Then you should use a generous quantity of manure or bone meal with the soil.

I am inclosing a leaf from a plant which requires a tonic. The root of this fern was brought many years ago from England. It grew very large and has been transplanted and divided many times. This last year the leaves have not been attaining their usual size and they seem to droop more than formerly. Some one called the plant a hair's-foot fern. Is this the correct name? MISS VAL.

Your plant is a polypodium (hare's-foot) fern, the variety with the hairy root. Keep the plant in the sun, as this is the one variety of fern which will tolerate sun. Water it every day and keep the leaves clean by constant spraying with cold water. Better give it some bone meal at this time.

I have two large rubber plants which have been attacked by insects. These play about the soil and appear like minute flies. Please advise me of a way to get rid of them. May I transplant the plant at this time?

MRS. D. G.

A few sprayings of soil and foliage with nicotine solution will soon rid the plants of white flies. This is a good time to transplant any foliage plant.

Please tell me whether the polygonum auberti is a wise choice of vine for a front porch. Does it attract insects? HELEN G. T.

The polygonum is a most desirable rapid-growing vine of general use. It is especially suited for planting about the house and does not attract insects. It does not, however, cling to a wall, but rambles over any kind of support. It bears most delightful white flowers.

"Please explain whether climbing roses are as particular as bush roses about soil. Also tell me of a good red variety and when some ramblers which are well established should be pruned." JAMES T. M.

No, climbing roses are not as demanding about soil conditions as are the bush roses. Climbing roses must be pruned immediately after they have finished flowering, as they bloom on wood made the previous season. Paul Scarlet is one of the very best red climbing roses we have. At a recent flower show one of our most noted rose growers said that in his opinion it was the best.

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

THE family name "Lindberg" (also spelled "Lindbergh") is of Scandinavian origin. It means "the lime-tree mountain" and indicates the place of residence of the persons who were first so called.

The family name "Charles" is derived ultimately from the Germanic "Karalas," which may be translated "the man" or "manly." Scandinavian forms of this name are "Karl," "Kalle" and "Karel."

The family name "Morrow" may be traced back to three different sources. In many cases it is of Celtic origin and means "the son of the mariner" or "the son of the lord." It is also found as a purely English name, and as such its full significance is either "he who lives at the row of dwellings near the moor" or "he who lives at the corner of the moor." An English document of the year 1379 mentions a certain Willelmus de Morerawe and a Johannes Marowe.

The personal names "Ann," "Anne" and "Anna" are shortened forms of "Hannah." "Hanah" is of Hebrew origin and may be translated "merciful" or "gracious."

The family names "Burchell," "Burchall," "Birchall" and "Birchell" have come down to us from two English sources which indicate original places of residence. When their source is the old English "Birceheall" they mean "the hall near the birch-trees." In some cases they may be traced back to the old English "birce-healh" and may therefore mean either "the slope near the birch-trees" or "the corner near the birch-trees." These family names do not seem to occur in the earliest English records. A legal document of the year 1581 bears the name of a weaver named Richard Birchall.

Watch this column every day. Your name will appear here.

Station ZAIN Describes How Various Products Serve Couple.

Station POST ZAIN AD WRITING CONTEST announcing: Hello, everybody. Have you had your cup of Wilkins coffee this morning? Good! We will now proceed with the story of a very busy, happy day enjoyed by The Post and Zain with their out-of-town school chums who were stopping at the Carlton Hotel on K street, which had been highly recommended to them.

This was the first opportunity Louise and Clarice had to visit the Capital City, where The Post and Zain had made good and they thoroughly enjoyed the drive around the speedway to see the famous cherry blossoms in the spiffy new model Ford sedan purchased by the girls from Steuart Motor Co. with their own earnings. They also drove through Rock Creek, visited the Zoo and saw many beautiful, interesting buildings, including the Wardman Park Hotel.

Remember Estelle, who graduated the same year we did and married soon after and came to Washington with her lawyer husband, who has an office, I hear, in the beautiful Washington Building on New York avenue? She's so happy in her new home, purchased through the real estate office of Waverly Taylor, Inc. She wanted us to come out to dinner. Her sister is living with them and taking a course in business training at Boyd Business University. You remember little Mabel, she surely will be a business woman. She borrowed the money for her education from the Federal American National Bank & Trust Co and Estelle is giving her piano lessons on the baby grand Joe bought her for Christmas from the Arthur Jordan Piano Co.

Home Is Ideally Furnished.

The girls exclaimed with rapture when they beheld Estelle's pretty little home among the big oak trees and the lovely flower bed in the yard, but when they went inside they were amazed at the amount of room so many conveniences had provided. "You see," explained Estelle, "I bought the furniture from P. J. Nee Co. to harmonize with the house, consulting their interior decorator, and the Westinghouse Refrigerator from the Edgar Morris Sales Co. fits into the nook that was built for it, and the Potomac Electric Light & Power Co. furnished me with all these labor-saving devices. You must come to my nice light basement and see my A. B. C. washer and Conlon ironer I bought from Barber & Ross, Inc., and the Automatic Gas Heater from Washington Gas Light Co. You can't imagine how these devices lighten housework and make it a joy. Of course, I send the heavy things to the Home Laundry, which does beautiful work.

"I hear Joe coming and dinner is almost ready. He phoned that he was going to buy a new suit at D. J. Kaufman,, and I am anxious to see his spring outfit. He bought his spring coat at J. M. Stein & Co. He patronizes these tailors as he feels he can always depend upon them."

"Hello, girls, it's nice to see you all again," was Joe's greeting. "How is everybody back home? You must be starved; I know I am. Did the groceries come all right, Estelle? I stopped at United Food Stores and ordered everything you had on the list and I know you have visited the Associated Bakery, for I smell the odor of delicious pie. You see, Estelle doesn't bother much with baking when we can get such well-baked bread and cake with the home-made flavor and Junior takes up most of her time now.

Picture Keeps Mother's Memory.

"Isn't it time for that young man to put in his public appearance?" he asked Estelle. "Yes, after a while, he has finished his nap and Mabel promised to take care of him so we could eat in peace," she replied. "I get his special hi-test Jersey milk from the Fairfax Farms Dairies and—here he comes, see what a healthy youngster he is!

"Isn't he adorable! Who does he look like?" greeted the youngster's appearance.

Estelle did not resent this question, for she knew the baby's brunet beauty did not come from her blond side of the family. "I think he favors Joe's mother," she said. "Here is a photograph of her taken by Underwood & Underwood just before she passed away last year. Isn't she sweet? The expression is so like her, I feel she is still with us. The funeral was quiet and lovely. The Deal Funeral Home, who took charge of it, spared us every anguish by their competent service. Her furniture is well taken care of at the Merchants Transfer & Storage Co.

"Don't you think it is comfortable here? The house is heated by an oil burner installed by L. P. Steuart & Bros., and gives no trouble at all. It is self-regulating and on these warm days burns little oil. I want to show you the plumbing put in by Thomas E. Clark, Inc. We chose light green for the kitchen and pale rose for the bathroom. The colors are so cheerful and are easy to clean and look fresh.

Painted Furniture Themselves.

"And now I want you to see the fine paint job Joe and I did with our bedroom furniture and nursery. We bought the unfinished articles and with paint from E. J. Murphy Co. Inc., in pastel shades, made this floor a dream."

The girls were properly enthusiastic and were hoping to some day have as attractive a home. Estelle spied a sparkling ring on Clarice's finger and guessed it wouldn't be long now. They compared rings, as girls will, and Estelle explained that her ring, as well as most of her silverware, came from Goldsmith & Co., whose 57 years of reliability guaranteed satisfaction.

After a refreshing drink of National Pale Dry Ginger Ale from the Guggenheim Co., Joe suggested that they take in a show at the Earle Theater, where a popular Warner Bros. picture was playing, and he was sure the stage show would be good. So with a box of candy from Avignone Freres, they enjoyed the rest of the evening together.

The next day the girls had a fine sightseeing program and also received a card printed by Gibson Bros., inviting them to a dance in the evening, so it behooved them to spruce up a bit. They sent some things to the Starlight Dry Cleaners to be refreshed, hied to Emile, Inc., for a facial, finger wave and manicure, stopped at Rizik Bros. for new evening gowns and had the time of their lives.

When ready to depart for home they found the tires of the car badly worn so they speedily equipped with new tires by one of the Bailey Tire Stores, and thus endeth the story, as they speed away homeward, filled with happy memories.

CAMERA—ONE OF ITS STUDIES

Above picture is the camera that Miss Virginia Lee Ryan, of 1321 M street northwest, wrote her $100 prize-winning ad about in the fourth week of the Post-Zain ad writing contest for Underwood & Underwood. May we tell you more about this prize-winning camera and just what it does? Glorious portraits never before possible are made by the new Beidler-Viken method. Photographing at speeds so high no posing is necessary, this new camera makes more natural and lifelike portraits than have ever been known before. Always six, usually twelve, eighteen or more poses are bound in series in books of hand-tooled Moroccan leather, a fascinating picture story of a child's life crowded with different expressions, varied backgrounds, clothes and moods are obtainable only from Underwood & Underwood.

Such portrait studies are made possible, and at surprisingly low prices, by the basic improvements in child portraiture in a generation—patented and exclusively used by Underwood & Underwood. Really words can not express what beautiful pictures this camera can produce, as the Beidler-Viken method of photography is perfect. It snaps the child without any posing whatsoever. In your own home, outdoors, or in the special studios, such as the picture above illustrates, this remarkable camera is equally adaptable. Child photographers, who are artists, interest the youngsters as only an artist can—and when they see reflected the witchery and charm of childhood—the camera is ready to capture the picture of your child for a lifetime of memories for you.

LOW MEDICAL COST IS URGED BY WILBUR

Group Financing Advocated by Secretary Before Committee of 50.

Fifty leaders in the fields of medicine, dentistry, public health, economics and social sciences, assembled as the committee on the cost of medical care, yesterday received from Secretary of the Interior Wilbur the message that to obliterate much duplication, waste of time, effort and money in the care of sickness "we must not fear further experiments, some of them of bold character."

Dr. Wilbur spoke as chairman of the committee, presiding at the opening of its annual spring meeting at the Mayflower Hotel, marking the end of its fourth year in a five-year study of extensive research in the problem, "the delivery of adequate, scientific medical service to all the people, rich and poor, at a cost which can be reasonably met by them in their respective stations in life."

"It becomes clearer every day that the mere handling of the physical side of disease is not enough," he declared. "The present widespread dislocation between need and medical care can be largely overcome. Certainly, from a social standpoint, we can well afford to pay a larger proportion of our present annual income for the protection of health, both public and private. With an expanded national expenditure we should endeavor to see that a larger proportion of it is brought into the health service of the human being."

QUIZ INTO RHEEM'S OWN FUNDS BALKED

Referee's Ruling Halts Probe Into Personal Deals; Bond Is Renewed.

Guy secure written agreement of holders of $300,000 of the $650,000 first trust notes outstanding, before he forms the corporation. Noteholders representing $180,000 of notes last night signified their approval, and the rest were urged to seek the advice of counsel.

Guy, who with a group of about fifteen lawyers representing noteholders was the moving force in last night's meeting, pointed out that their notes, secured only by a 99-year leasehold, are liable to forfeiture at any time, in default of about $60,000 taxes advanced by the Washington Loan & Trust Co., lessor of the property.

He declared an emergency existed in view of the suit for foreclosure of the $112,000 chattel mortgage on furnishings and equipment of the apartment-hotel, to recover payments in default. The suit by Hugh O'Bear and Edmund D. Campbell, as trustees under the chattel deed, will be heard by Justice Adkins in the District Supreme Court Monday.

Guy pointed out that forced sale of the furniture would leave the hotel obviously unequipped to operate.

His plan, as outlined last night to noteholders, is to organize "The Hay-Adams House, Inc.," issue 6,500 shares of common stock, assigning a share of the new stock for every $100 of notes turned in.

His plan then calls for foreclosure of the $650,000 first trust loan on the leasehold, wiping out the equity of $400,000 of second trust noteholders, and leaving the new corporation in a position to operate the property with a view to saving their investment. Guy declared the $400,000 second trust equity "worthless anyway."

He declared he was convinced his plan might save noteholders two-thirds of their investment, whereas otherwise they stand to lose all.

Disorder Follows Outline.

Veritable chaos broke out as the noteholders discussed the plan or shouted for explanations. The situation was not improved when George E. Sullivan moved for adjournment until noteholders had an opportunity to consult counsel. Sullivan's motion was followed by an amendment by E. Hilton Jackson, who suggested that those who wished be permitted to affix their signatures to the plan last night.

Insisting that any delay would make the effort ineffectual, David A. Pine moved to table the motion, and a division was called.

Oil was poured on the troubled waters by Paul Leah, who moved to give Guy power to proceed to form the corporation providing signatures to the value of $300,000 in notes is received in the next few days. Failing in this, Guy was to call another meeting of noteholders Monday. Meanwhile, he was to go before Justice Adkins Monday in an effort to delay foreclosure of the chattel mortgage. The motion was adopted with only three dissenting votes.

Inquiry Meets Rebuff.

Inquiry into the private fiscal status of Edmund D. Rheem, executive vice president of the bankrupt firm, and into his personal transactions with A. Joseph Howar, local builder, met with a check yesterday at hearings before Referee in Bankruptcy Fred J. Eden.

Following up a line of questioning that brought out alleged overpayments of several hundred thousand dollars to Mr. Howar, Attorney Marcus Borchardt turned his examination on Rheem's private finances. Here a ruling of the referee brought his efforts to a halt.

Meanwhile, the setting shifted to the District Supreme Court, where Rheem and J. Newton Brewer (second vice president of the bankrupt firm), who was indicted with Rheem Tuesday on charges of embezzlement and concealing writings, pleaded "not guilty." They were arraigned before Justice Gordon.

Rheem posted a new $25,000 bond when the old one was canceled, and Brewer was allowed to continue on the $10,000 put up Wednesday.

Clashes Mark Quiz.

Examination of Rheem by creditors at the Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co. offices, was marked by frequent heated tilts between counsel, and admonitions by the referee. However, the subject of much of the controversy was builder of a number of the released properties involved in the investigation.

During questioning concerning Rheem's business relations with Howar, Referee Eden cautioned counsel, "Mr. Howar is not in bankruptcy," and that the builder is not a witness in the proceedings.

When Borchardt said he proposed to show an "interlocking connection" between Harry Wardman, or one of the Wardman companies and the bankrupt, he was allowed to proceed for a time.

He only succeeded in establishing, however, that Rheem met Howar about ten years ago through Frank White, who formerly was an architect with the Wardman company.

Rheem volunteered that Howar gave him power of attorney to sign checks for him when he went away once for four months, and that "rarely did he make a business deal without consulting me."

The remarks of Borchardt, involving alleged discrepancies in the bankrupt's accounts, were ordered stricken from the record, following protest by Leon Tobriner, counsel for Rheem.

Borchardt and Tobriner clashed frequently on the propriety of the former's questioning.

Tells of Le Bourget Deal.

Rheem told how the Le Bourget, at 2127 California street northwest, was bought in by his company after it was sold under foreclosure, and how a loan of $250,000 subsequently was placed on the building. Rheem said this amount was credited to the accounts of noteholders, but "could not recall" whether all had been paid.

Richardson next asked what was done with proceeds from $100,000 in first trust notes maturing on the Cathedral Garage in October, 1930. Rheem made a similar response.

Sullivan took over the examination here to question the witness on additional properties in which Howar was interested, ranging in value from $65,000 to $325,000. His inquiry centered about a trade of property at 2126 I street northwest, for houses at 3120 and 3121 Fairmont street northwest, two others on M street northwest, and unimproved ground at Massachusetts and Nebraska avenue northwest.

Rheem claimed that he might tend to incriminate himself, when asked what was done to pay off noteholders when deeds were released on the Massachusetts avenue plot.

Immaculata Class Gives Barrie Play

Entire Cast Is Effective in Presentation of Drama, "Quality Street."

Dramatic talent of high order was displayed by the senior class of Immaculata Seminary in a presentation last night of J. M. Barrie's heart-interest play, "Quality Street."

The production was given in the seminary auditorium, which was crowded with students, the families and friends of the students, priests and religious from local educational institutions.

Graceful and intelligent interpretation of the various roles and faultless enunciation of Barrie's poetic lines marked the performance throughout. The training of the Sister of Providence, famed teachers of expression, was evident in the rendering of lines by each of the girls.

Honors were won by Miss Ann Joy Chambers in the role of "Miss Phoebe Throssel." She handled the delicate requirements of the part with skill and professional smoothness. Miss Anna Mae Ryan as "Miss Susan Throssel" also gave a flawless presentation of a difficult role.

Dashing Capt. Valentine Brown was excellently portrayed by Miss Mary Elsie Steuart, who was fascinating in her graceful and chivalrous speeches and attentions to the ladies.

Repeated applause was won by Miss Nora O'Neil for a highly effective character sketch of "Patty." "Miss Fanny Willoughby" and "Miss Mary Willoughby" were well done by Miss Eloise Cross and Miss Mary M. Collins.

POST BRIDGE TOURNEY WINNERS WILL BE DECIDED IN PLAY TODAY

Washington to watch the event, was drafted into service to superintend the playing of the second division.

Withal there was a lack of confusion, for the participants, eager for the contest, soon settled themselves to serious playing and succeeded in bringing the session to a successful close on scheduled time. In the two classes of contract, one for the advanced players and the other for the intermediate players, there were 86 tables, or 344 contestants.

Yesterday afternoon witnessed the finals in the pair contests in both classes of contract and of auction, with the eleven leading pairs as follows:

Hold Contract Finals Tonight.

Although the finals in the two classes of contract will be held tonight, the play of last night was regarded as the most brilliant of the series. Participating in it were many recognized as the strongest players in the Capital, and the scores they made, although not decisive, are regarded as highly indicative of the championship. These scores, however, will be cumulative and will be added to the scores made in the matches tonight to determine the winners.

Yesterday there was some misunderstanding with respect to eliminations, many players believing that the low scores they made in the first session of the pair contest would not entitle them to continue in the second session. The matter was satisfactorily adjusted, however, by announcement that in both the auction and the contract team contests scoring will be cumulative. That means that players who have taken part in the first sessions of either form of the game are not disqualified for participation in the second session.

There will be no eliminations in the team matches, but scores made in each session will figure in the final determination of the winners of the handsome trophies to be awarded by The Washington Post. Consequently, all those who played last night are entitled to return tonight and endeavor, if possible, to recoup and become eligible for championships by augmenting the scores made Thursday night in the auction team contest and last night in the contract team contests.

Contract A Team Leaders.

Following are the leaders in last night's contract A teams of four matches, not given, however, in order of their rank:

Runners-Up Challenge Winners.

L. A. Luce and W. Frank Gibbs, runners-up in the Auction A pair contest, were the first to issue a challenge to the winners of that match, Dr. David H. Kushner and Dr. Samuel Dessoff. The latter had a match point score in this event of 143 match points, while Luce and Gibbs followed them with a score of 129½ match points. As soon as the results were posted, Luce and Gibbs announced that although entirely satisfied with the scoring, they nevertheless believed themselves better bridge players than their leading rivals, and wished an opportunity to prove their superiority.

Dr. Kushner and Dr. Dessoff were not present at the Shoreham at that time, and the challengers announced that they would send the winners a written challenge. Luce and Gibbs are lawyers, while the two winners are physicians.

PLAYERS ADD GRIEF IN BELASCO DEATH

Scores of Messages Praise Aid Given by Him to Stage Stars.

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Messages of grief and tribute flowed today into the stilled studio of David Belasco from legions of players whose careers he helped to mold.

They were not made public by relatives of the little gray master of stagecraft, whose death yesterday at 76 quenched the flame which had burned bright on Broadway for 51 years. The messages—more than a thousand of them—were read by kin and laid away with other mementoes of a lifetime, rich without precedent in associations with the theater.

But expressions of sorrow were there, associates knew, from score upon score of players, famous on stage and screen, whose feet David Belasco had helped to place in the path of greatness.

Marvelling in retrospection at the span of Belasco's active lifetime, friends recalled today he was a versatile actor before he turned his whole attention to producing and directing.

He was the master, his records showed, of 172 roles, ranging from Hamlet to Topsy in "Uncle Tom's Cabin." In Tom shows he had, at one time or another, played also Simon Legree, Lawyer Marks, Uncle Tom himself and two or three other roles.

He had done Fagin in "Oliver Twist" dozens of times in the Western years, when he was trouping between San Francisco and Virginia City, Nev., and in his youthful days he played Mrs. Cornelia in his touring company of "East Lynne."

Funeral plans were unchanged today, save in the substitution of William Morris for Al Jolson, who is ill, as one of the pallbearers. Others at the funeral Sunday in the Central Synagogue will include Mayor James J. Walker, Daniel Frohman, Lee Shubert, George M. Cohan, Frank Gilmore, Edwin C. Carpenter, Mitchell Erlanger, A. O. Brown and Edmund Coblentz.

Interment will be at Linden Hills Cemetery, on Long Island, in the Belasco mausoleum beside the body of Mrs. Belasco, who died six years ago, and Augusta, a daughter, who died in her youth and beside whose casket her father always kept a candle burning "because she feared the dark."

ABOUT THE SHOWSHOPS

With NELSON B. BELL

THOSE pessimistic observers of the theater who feel sure that "the road" has disappeared from the face of the earth should cast their jaundiced eyes over the May issue of The Quill, official publication of the Theatrical Press Representatives of America, of which Wallace Munroe is president, and learn just how egregiously they have blundered. Not only is there a "road" that has proved profitable to many touring companies during the season now closing, but plans are afoot which, if successfully carried out, will restore it to something at least approximating its former glory.

This movement, as I understand it, finds its genesis in the decision of the Theater Guild to present what the profession terms "trade-marked" plays in addition to those of its own production next season. A complete outline of this plan, and a list of the plays involved, will be found in the dramatic department of tomorrow's issue of The Post.

Coincident with this project is a further expansive scheme to extend the subscription plan beyond the larger cities of the country to the smaller communities seldom favored with "big time" attractions. It is the confident belief—derived from the successful operation of the subscription plan in practically all of the localities in which it has been subjected to practical test—that the pursuit of this idea will rehabilitate "the road" beyond anything else that could be undertaken.

Enthusiasm has penetrated sufficiently far to persuade many stars of the stage who have not toured in several seasons to resume the practice next year.

We shall see.

George Morris, the energetic young liaison officer and publicist, who has been in Washington for several days promoting the "road show" presentation of Columbia Pictures' special production of "Dirigible," having seen his efforts bear fruit to the extent of practically capacity business at the Metropolitan Theater yesterday and day before, returns to New York today happy in the consciousness of work well done.

He didn't say that in so many words, but you should have seen his face!

"Dirigible," by the way, will be shown three times tomorrow, instead of twice as is the case on week days. The first screening of this exciting epic of the gas bags will be at 2:30, the second at 5:30 and the last at 8:30 p. m. The two-a-day policy will be resumed on Monday.

And that reminds me, Jack Holt is what might be termed fairly prevalent on the local screens this incoming week, carrying much of the burden of "Dirigible," at the Met, and playing the role of the detective in "Subway Express," at RKO-Keith's.

The newsreels certainly go in for wide variety of both subject matter and locale in their releases for the new week. If you shop around a bit you will be able to participate in the induction into office of the new Viceroy of India, hear Charles M. Schwab, the steel king, advise a bunch of youngsters in the tricky business of calf raising, see "Two-gun" Crowley, who had five on him at the time, carried out of his apartment-fortress in uptown New York; see some of the nastiest tumbles ever photographed during the jumping events in a horse show in Sydney, Australia, and, finally, go down into the depths of the sea, via the patented Williamson tube through which he photographs his amazing pictures of deep marine life.

Join the army of movie fans and see the world!

And among the day's callers were Maxine Doyle, the Earle's mellifluous mistress of ceremonies, and her also talented sister, Billee, who showed me a clipping that proved conclusively that she was out in California coaching stage aspirants in dance routines. I'll be glad to meet her when she comes East! And so would you be!

You probably have seen two members of the National Theater Players before, even if you don't remember it. Nancy Sheridan once appeared locally in a musical comedy—or maybe it was an operetta—"Blossom Time," but she wore a disguise so complete that her own mother would not have recognized her, so what chance did you have?

Roberta Beatty was a member of the cast of the revival of "Sherlock Holmes," which William Gillette brought to the National two seasons ago.

Marlene Dietrich has expressed a preference to appear only under the direction of Josef von Sternberg in her American-made pictures, and seems to be getting her wish.

Both "Morocco" and "The Blue Angel" were directed by Von Sternberg, but he did even better than that in "Dishonored," in which Frau Dietrich and Victor McLaglen open today at the Columbia. He also wrote it.

Reverting momentarily to Nancy Sheridan, so instant and overwhelming has been the success of this gifted young leading woman of the National Players that she has been besieged for photographs of herself by patrons of Mr. Cochran's E street temple of Thespis.

Recognizing the demand, and wishing to relieve Miss Sheridan of the expense and trouble of mailing so many pictures, the management has assumed the burden and next week at the Wednesday and Saturday matinees will present an autographed photograph of Miss Sheridan to every feminine patron.

If I can find that old Katisha wig, I might even sneak in for one myself.

FOX

"YOUNG SINNERS." Fox picturization of the stage play by Elmer Harris, adapted to the screen by William Counselman, featuring Thomas Meighan, Dorothy Jordan, James Kirkwood and Hardie Albright, supported by Cecilia Loftus, Edmund Breese and Lucien Prival. Directed by John Blystone. Reviewed Friday afternoon.

By NELSON B. BELL.

From a play which at the time of its production was considered a bit daring there has been derived a reasonably safe and sane phonodrama that moves rapidly, but at no time dangerously. After having startled the audience by firing a few heavy blank cartridges in the way of drinking, petting, &c., in its early sequences, when the "young sinners" are running wild in one of Florida's winter playgrounds, the explosive little play settles down into a substantial object lesson of how best to bring about a young man's redemption from liquor, Lorelein and laziness. The formula seems to be to turn him over to a husky body-builder up in the Adirondacks and have his block knocked off a few times by way of improving his perspective on life.

That is what his misunderstanding father did to Gene Gibson, and that it all turned out satisfactorily for every one concerned was no more his fault than Tom McGuire's, Connie Sinclair's or Baron von Konetz, who turned out to be bogus and so automatically broke the engagement that Connie never took seriously, anyhow.

These roles are handsomely played, in the order named, by Hardie Albright, brought to the screen from the stage production of "The Greeks Had a Word For It;" Thomas Meighan, who here makes a fine return to the silver sheet in the part of McGuire, the trainer, which he plays easily and humorously with a rich Irish brogue; Dorothy Jordan, the major temptation, and Lucien Prival, who has another of those monocle and heel-clicking roles he does so well in the Von Stroheim manner. James Kirkwood is cast as the father, who finally makes good, and Cecilia Loftus, as Connie's mother, who finally gives in. The early action is all cluttered up with talented young folk. Edmund Breese adds a steadying touch among the oldsters.

A nice, jolly, little romance you will find here, of no importance whatever, but diverting and vivaciously done. This young Mr. Albright will bear a lot of watching, and Phillips Holmes had better look to his laurels—if that is what he is wearing this year.

On the stage, Fanchon & Marco's "Society Circus" idea spans a wide range of entertainment, from blackface comedy to some real circus tricks by Wooding's troupe of tiny Shetland ponies. The Harris Twins are male gymnasts, acrobats and dancers; Tabor and Greene, the clever blackface comics with a couple of powerful voices and a three-octave piano; Betty, Irene and Sylvia, dancers; Rose Marie Carter, an acrobatic danseuse. Not forgetting the Sunkist Beauties, who execute some extraordinary routines — some on stilts and some on those big rolling globes, like Joe Cook.

Johnny Marvin assisted by a young woman whose name I understood to be Hester Bell, and whom I am sure could not be heard beyond the seventh row of the orchestra—I sat in the sixth—scored a rousing hit with his song prescriptions in a short television skit, "Dr. Cheer." Mr. Marvin, from every indication, will do well here as long as he cares to remain.

The Fox Movietone News and submerged orchestra contributions completed the first afternoon program, Bob Hamilton and his "Locomotive" somehow having been deleted from the goings-on I attended.

RKO-KEITH'S

"SUBWAY EXPRESS." A Columbia Pictures filmization of the play by Eva K. Flint and Martha Madison, adapted for the screen by Earl Snell; featuring Jack Holt, supported by Aileene Pringle, Jason Robards, Sidney Bracey and Fred Kelsey. Directed by Fred Newmeyer. Reviewed Friday evening by W. A. Whitney.

When a detective play like "Subway Express," that has so recently played the local boards, and has come to be know as the ne plus ultra in its field, is picturized, much is expected of the film translation. And the manner in which Earl Snell has effected the transition is highly to be commended, for here are the thrills, the suspense and the ever-puzzling question, "Who did commit the murder?"

While the celluloid translation omits certain elements of the original plot, there has been no sacrifice of the essential details and the screen subject is no less an achievement of detective-drama building than was the stage production.

As the inspector who finally unravels this perfectly knit mystery is Jack Holt, and he delivers one of his less pretentious, but none-the-less effective, delineations. The other principals are Alan Roscoe, as the murdered man; Jason Robards, as the partner in business, and Aileen Pringle, as Roscoe's very charming young wife. The principals, as well as the entire supporting cast, with one exception, are admirably chosen for their respective roles and carry their several parts with a conviction that renders the denouement all the more astounding.

The one exception is Fred Kelsey. Detective dramas ought to be played with a seriousness not entirely foreign to that which would be associated in real life with the same situations. Yet, Kelsey, as the dumber than dumb assistant to Mr. Holt, is thoroughly obnoxious in his obvious attempt to inject an element of comedy into situations that are otherwise painfully real and masterfully acted.

The idea that a play confined entirely to the interior of a single subway car could not possibly be made into a tense motion picture, must be discarded, for here is a drama that does not offer a dull moment, interest being maintained with almost breathless excitement during the entire screening.

Heading the list of subsidiary attractions is Mickey Mouse, recent stellar addition to the roster of United Artists, as "The Castaway." Louise Fazenda and Jimmy Finlayson get together in "Second Hand Kisses," an amusing slap-stick comedy of second marriages and the riotous army from an orphanage. "Diamond Experts," a Grantland Rice Sportlight, shows the baseball favorites in action. A release of the Pathe News completes the screen fare.

Beneficiaries to Inform Donors to Chest Fund

The importance of organizations which were designated as beneficiaries in donations of individuals to the Community Chest, keeping in touch with those donors, was stressed yesterday at a meeting of the Chest Publicity Council, at the Y. W. C. A.

The discussion was led by Miss Jean Cole, superintendent of the Florence Crittenton Home, and Mrs. Elizabeth Coleman, superintendent of the National Homeopathic Hospital. Both said that persons designating their organizations were to receive letters and reports of the activities of the home and hospital.

Suicide Cult Story Related By Woman Accused in Death

Two Elderly Men Found Dead, Killed Selves After Group Prayers for Relief of Pain Were Unavailing, Sister of One Says.

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Police of Nassau County were told today that two violent deaths in three days resulted from the operations of a "suicide cult."

The deaths were those of elderly men, both ill for some time. One of them killed himself by hanging, the other died from two bullet wounds in the top of his head.

Information concerning the existence of the supposed cult was given by a sister of one of the men, Miss Louise Schwarz, 57, who professed also to be a member of the group. She was indicted today by the Nassau County grand jury for second degree murder in the killing of her brother, Edward Schwarz, 55, who was shot to death.

Questioned by police, Miss Schwarz said she and her brother were members of a group of middle-aged and ailing persons who met weekly and tried to relieve their pain by prayer. If prayers failed, according to her story, the members committed suicide. The group held its last meeting Monday, she added, with an attendance of 26.

On the following day George Breitenbach, 61, of Amityville, Long Island, was found hanging from a rafter in his home. Miss Schwarz said he was a member of the cult.

Her brother, who had attended the meeting, also failed to get relief, she went on, and decided to kill himself. On Tuesday night she bathed and dressed him, then left the house to return early Wednesday. He was found dead in a chair in the living room, the gun in his clenched hand.

The indictment of Miss Schwarz was based on testimony that her brother could not have inflicted the wounds on himself.

The Schwarzes, both unmarried, lived in a small house in West Amityville and were supported by a brother, Oscar Schwarz, who lives in Chicago.

RUSSIAN AID NEEDED FOR PACT ON WHEAT

International Conference, to Open Tuesday, May Solve Market Situation.

London, May 15 (A.P.).—Authorities on world wheat problems, surveying tonight the prospects of the international wheat conference which opens here May 19, were agreed that Russian participation in any agreement that might be reached was vitally necessary for the success of that gathering, designed to invigorate the ailing wheat markets of the world.

Representatives of eleven wheat-exporting countries in four continents were here or en route. The American, Canadian and Russian delegations were already in London; the Argentines were expected tomorrow. Each group is bringing its own plan, but all are guarding their proposed cures pending their presentation to the conference. Market experts refuse to express an opinion on the chances of an agreement resulting from the session.

Because of Russia's great potential wheat acreage and her recently strengthened credit relations with Germany, it is reasoned that she is in a position to break almost any wheat market. Through the recent action of the Reichstag guaranteeing, within limitations, Russia's purchases in Germany, authorities believe German sellers will be able to grant longer credit terms to Russian buyers.

Russia Could Shade Prices.

This in turn might result in a close German-Russian liaison, which would remove Germany, normally importing 80,000,000 bushels of wheat a year, from the reach of other world wheat exporters. In view of the improvement of Russo-German credit relations, experts see a chance for Russia to increase wheat production and to shade prices whenever she wants to.

Traders in the wheat market believe a combination of the exporting countries almost inevitably will result in a responsive combination of the importers seeking to drive prices down to help their own national bread-baskets.

Meanwhile the conference is faced with the problem of finding additional outlets to take care of the surplus from the 1930 world wheat crop of 48,710,000,000 bushels.

Measures Held Impractical.

(Associated Press.)

Wheat surplus control measures involving participation, under contract, of 75 per cent of the farmers, were held yesterday by the Farm Board to be impracticable in dealing with the country's overproduction problem.

The board's position was outlined by Chairman Stone, in a letter to State Senator F. J. Wilmer, of Washington State, who had advanced a plan for handling the next three crop surpluses and reducing acreage by signing up at least 75 per cent of the producers under a three-year contract.

Mr. Stone, in reiterating the board's contention that the problem's solution and better prices lay in individual efforts toward crop reduction, said "the history of even regional sign-up campaigns among farmers is extremely discouraging, and so is the evidence of results to farmers from such campaigns."

Under the Wilmer plan farmers would agree to hold on their farms or deliver for export through the Farmers' National Grain Corporation sufficient wheat to reduce the surplus to domestic consumption needs and cut acreage by a designated amount in 1932 and 1933.

SALAD, FRUIT ADDED TO ONE-DISH MEALS

Wholesome Menu Improved by Vegetable Supplement in Spring-Time.

As spring advances, one-dish meals can be supplemented with a salad or fruit according to a bulletin recently gotten out by the Bureau of Home Economics of the U. S. Department of Agriculture. It is stated that by this means there is saving of time and energy and economy as well. The bureau points out that in meals of this sort, starchy and protein foods can be served along with the vegetables in a single dish.

Of course, all the ingredients of a well-balanced meal can be included in single-dish meals, but such a meal is made more interesting and nutritious by the addition of a raw vegetable salad, stewed or fresh fruit in season. In these raw foods are to be found the valuable vitamin C, likely to be destroyed in long cooking.

Dishes Already Prepared.

Women in business and industry with families to cook for find this type of meal valuable because it can be served quickly and it simplifies their work. Dr. Louise Stanley, chief of the bureau, says it would be desirable if mothers could purchase these dishes already prepared. Day nurseries and industrial plants with cafeterias would perform a real service, she said, if they would prepare one-dish meals to sell at cost to working mothers. Both the day nurseries and the industrial cafeterias have the equipment for cooking and this plan would not entail additional expense except for labor and materials, she said. Such a plan would increase the use of the kitchen equipment when it is usually idle, she pointed out.

Many combinations of food can be used for one-dish meals. Some which the bureau advocates are meat stews with vegetables, shepard pies, chowders and thick vegetable soups made with meat stock.

The one dish meal is not a twentieth century invention for it harks back to the earliest forms of cooking on which, even today, some of the nomadic tribes of the Old World still subsist. After the value of cooking food was discovered the meats were first broiled over a fire on a stick. The next step was to bury it in leaves in embers and then it was found that daubing food with clay before burying it was better still.

Cooking Pot Arrives.

With the advent of a cooking pot, hot stones were dropped into it to cook the ingredients and finally the pot itself was placed over the coals. So into this container were placed the meat and cereals that made up the meals. When vegetables became known they were added to the other foods in the pot and this form of cooking served man for a long time. The ancients had no thought of saving time, money, or labor. Their primitive needs were easily satisfied by simple meals to which, in times of necessity, we find ourselves returning.

Elaborate meals are costly and no more nutritious than simple ones planned to contain foods that supply energy, build, and repair the body cells and those which may be termed regulatory. In the first group are the cereals and starches while such proteins as meat, fish, eggs, cheese, milk, and the legumes give energy. The vegetables and fruit comprise the latter class with their minerals and vitamins so necessary for maintaining normal nutrition.

Baked Cheese Tamale.

3 large onions, cut fine
3 tablespoons drippings
2 cups tomatoes
3 teaspoons salt
1½ cups cornmeal
Pepper
5 cups boiling water
1 cup grated cheese.

Cook the onions in the drippings for 10 minutes. Add the tomatoes, 1 teaspoon of salt and a little pepper, and cook 10 minutes longer. Sprinkle the cornmeal slowly into the boiling water, add the 2 teaspoons of salt, stir constantly and cook for 15 minutes. Into a greased baking dish place alternate layers of the mixture and sprinkle each layer with the cheese, reserving some of the cheese for the top layer. Bake about 25 minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit). Serve from the dish.

Fish Chowder.

1 onion, sliced.
2 cups carrots cut in pieces
9 potatoes, peeled and cut in small pieces
Pepper
3 tablespoons flour
3 cups milk
1½ pounds fish (fresh, salt or canned)

Cut pork in small pieces and fry with the chopped onion for 5 minutes. Put pork, onions, carrots and potatoes and pepper in kettle and cover with boiling water. Cook until vegetables are tender. Mix 3 tablespoons of flour with ½ cup of cold milk and stir in the liquid in the pot to thicken. Add the rest of the milk and the fish which has been removed from the bone and cut in small pieces. Cook until the fish is tender, about 10 minutes. Serve hot.

You can omit salt pork and use a tablespoon of other fat.

Rabbit, fowl, or any meat may be used instead of the fish, or tomatoes instead of milk.

Potted Hominy and Beef.

2 tablespoons fat
2 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
4 potatoes
2 cups carrots
5 cups cooked hominy
¼ pound dried beef
1 teaspoon salt

Heat 1½ quarts of water to boiling; add 1 teaspoon of salt and 2 cups of hominy which has been soaked overnight. Cook in a double boiler for four hours or in the fireless cooker overnight. This makes 5 cups.

Melt the fat, stir in the flour, add the cold milk and mix well. Cook until it thickens. Cut the potatoes and carrots in dice, mix all the materials in a baking dish, and bake for one hour.

This recipe may be increased and enough cooked in different ways for several meals. Hominy is excellent combined with dried, canned or fresh fish, or meat and vegetable leftovers may be used.

Parboil the spaghetti for 7 minutes in two quarts rapidly boiling water, to which one-half tablespoon salt has been added. Make a sauce of the milk, flour, butter and egg yolk. Set the pan in the refrigerator over night or longer. When ready to bake the cookies, turn the dough onto a bread board and cut into very thin slices; place on a greased baking sheet; sprinkle with sugar and bake in a hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit).

Stuffed Peppers Aid In Using Left-Overs

Almost everybody has a favorite recipe for stuffing peppers. The filling generally consists of rice or bread crumbs or macaroni—a starchy material—flavored with chopped onion, butter, salt, pepper, sometimes meat or chicken, and almost anything else the cook decides to put in or has left over.

6 green peppers.
2 cups flaky cooked rice or bread crumbs.
2 tablespoons butter or other fat.
2 cups ground cooked meat.
1 small onion, chopped fine.
½ teaspoon salt, or to taste.
¼ to ½ cup chili sauce, catsup, or meat gravy.
½ cup buttered crumbs.

Cut off the stem ends of the peppers, remove the seeds, boil the pepper shells for five minutes in lightly salted water and drain. Stuff the peppers with a mixture made from the other ingredients, cover with the buttered crumbs, and bake in a moderate over for about 30 minutes, or until the peppers are tender and the crumbs are brown.

Use of Domestic Foodstuffs Gains 20 Per Cent in 1930

(Associated Press.)

The American housewife set her table with 28 per cent more domestic food stuffs in 1930 than in either of the previous two years.

The Department of Commerce reported yesterday total food imports amounted to only $693,701,000 last year, a decline from both of the two previous years. The drop in value was attributed partly to the lower level of prices, although the quantity also showed a sharp decrease.

At the same time the department announced that exports of industrial machinery to Europe during 1930 reached the highest level since the abnormal post-war year of 1920.

European purchases of American industrial equipment totaled $89,125,000, as compared with $78,787,000 in 1929 and $63,830,000 in 1928.

In each of the three years, Europe surpassed all other areas as a market for industrial machinery, and the department held this increase in a depression year as "striking in view of the highly competitive conditions in Europe."

Soviet Russia was the leading European market last year, purchasing American equipment valued at $39,792,000, nearly three times the 1929 imports. Great Britain and France were the next largest purchasers.

Tropical and semitropical products, some of which are not grown in this country, continued to form the bulk of food stuffs imported.

Imports exceeded exports by $152,519,000, or 28 per cent, approximately the same percentage as in the two previous years. All foodstuffs imported during 1930 constituted 22.7 per cent of the total value of all American imports, while the value of all foodstuffs exported constituted 14.3 per cent of the total exports.

WHITE HORSES BRING HUSBANDS

OUR MOTHERS USED TO SAY "SEE A WHITE HORSE, THEN COUNT A HUNDRED AND YOU WILL MEET YOUR FUTURE HUSBAND." THE ANCIENT SAXON SOLDIERS MARCHED UNDER THE BANNER OF THE WHITE HORSE, AND THERE WAS MORE TRUTH THAN FICTION IN THE FACT THAT WHERE SOLDIERS CONGREGATED UNDER THE WHITE HORSE, THERE GIRLS WOULD FIND PLENTY OF MATERIAL FOR FUTURE HUSBANDS.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

SORES ON THE LEGS.

CHILDREN of school age are subject to sores located most frequently on the legs. If the ulcers are not seen as blisters or pustules, large, heavy, thick scabs are there to point the way to what has gone before.

In older people the later evidence of this trouble is seen as deep scars. Many of these persist as pigmented areas. Some girls, addicted to thin, transparent stockings, have been embarrasesd by these reminders of the hazards of childhood.

Physicians have a name for this trouble. It is impetigo. They go a step farther and tell us it is due to staphylococcus; that it is contagious, and that wherever a number of children are gathered together, as within the walls of a school, impetigo is likely to prevail all the time and occasionally to assume the features of a small epidemic. Every school nurse is taught to treat simple cases of impetigo in children on the theory that if she does not, nobody will.

Dr. W. J. O'Donovan tells how he handles impetigo in schools on his side of the water. To prevent it from spreading in a school, the children must come from clean homes, clean houses and wear clean clothing on clean bodies.

Cleanliness is the essence of prevention. Children who have it should wear cotton underwear. They should not come in close contact with noninfected children. If possible, they should stay in rooms that are kept warm and at an even temperature. Where possible, the stockings and underwear should be changed daily, and they should be boiled after use. They are capable of spreading the contagion.

So are the heavy scabs. Prolonged soaking and use of wet dressings should be employed to get rid of the heavy scabs. These scabs should be destroyed, since they carry contagion. When it is available, the best treatment, once the scabs are off, is three or four doses of ultraviolet light given once daily and just strong enough to redden the skin.

On the contrary, exposure to X-rays does harm. When ultraviolet is not available the sores are cleaned up with peroxide and hot water, and applications of 2 per cent malachite green in 80 per cent alcohol are made.

Dr. O'Donovan says he has had no success with Besredka's staphylococcus antivirus. His experience differs from that of some in this country who use staphylococcus phage, and others who use staphylococcus antivirus locally.

57TH DERBY TODAY DRAWS 15 NOMINEES ON FAST TRACK; NATS POUND STEWART OFF MOUND TO BEAT BROWNS, 8-5

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

A FAMILIAR line-up greets the eye in the American League with the first month of the season having passed into the limbo of forgotten games. The standings show the Athletics setting the pace with the Yankees and Nats in close attendance and Detroit bringing up the rear of the first division.

There can be no startling reaction there, but one need only glance at the standing of the National League clubs to suffer a shock in a couple of instances. There we find the Cardinals on top, conventionally enough, and the Giants in second place fairly enough, but the next notch is occupied by the Braves, of Boston, whereat is reason for the hoisting of an eyebrow or two.

But the blowdeo item of interest is the current position of Brooklyn's Robins, seventh place, which has been current with them for four weeks now, due to their inability to oust the tenacious Cincinnati Reds from the cellar.

Grief for Uncle Robbie

There is much grief in the camp of Uncle Robbie, whose self-defense outfield, sievelike infield and nondescript pitching staff astounded all and sundry by flailing the ball at such a rate last year that the club led the league until the final month of the season, when the Cardinals, Cubs and Giants rambled over and around the Robins and compressed themselves into the top three places in the standing before the curtain fell, leaving Uncle Robbie to pilot his daffiness boys into port in fourth place after a highly interesting and financially successful season.

At the close of the 1930 season Uncle Robbie took steps to prop up the failing fortunes of his boys, either in the hope of taking such a long lead away from the barrier that even a repetition of the 1930 collapse might not wreck his chances, or in the hope that the Robins would be able to pursue a more even tenor of play throughout the 154-game season.

To that end, Uncle Robbie acquired Lefty O'Doul, siege gun of the Phillies, to team with Babe Herman, Del Bissonette, Glenn Wright, Harvey Hendrick and the remainder of his battering band, thus making more ominous his attacking strength. And he obtained Fresco Thompson, also of the Phils, to temper the errant performances of his infield. These were in exchange for Pitcher Clise Dudley and Outfielder Harry Lee and a generous message from the checkbook of the Ebbetts estate.

Robins' Breasts Heave High

High beat the hopes in the Robins' breasts as the team migrated North from Florida and all Flatbush was ready to do it. They never had a chance. The Robins got away from the starting barrier like a dray horse in a derby field. One streak of six straight losses marked their early efforts. To date they have won nine and lost fifteen and Robbie has already released Hendrick outright to the Reds and benched O'Doul against left-handed pitching in the face of the fact that no type of pitching annoyed O'Doul while he was with the Phillies.

Uncle Robbie's woes are overflowing. Vance and Luque and Thurston can't win. The team can't hit. The fence busters who were the terror of the circuit's pitchers last season haven't knocked out a solitary board. The club as whole is hitting .243 in the latest averages, which entitles them to eighth place in the eight-club league.

Maybe its the family influence and Uncle Robbie's nephews are really "cousins" to the rest of the circuit.

Harris' Pinch Hit Feature Of Rally

Marberry Wastes 2-Run Lead; Hadley Is Star in Relief.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent).

ST. LOUIS, Mo., May 15.—Striking like lightning out of a clear sky, the Nationals suddenly pounced on Southpaw Walter Stewart in the eighth inning of the opening game of the series here this afternoon, pounded him off of the peak in the midst of a five-run rally, and turned in their fifth successive victory. At the finish the scoreboard read: Washington, 8; St. Louis, 5.

As the players say, the Nats "couldn't get a foul" off Stewart's slants last year, and after one baby rally in the second today, which netted two runs, the little southpaw found his bearings and had few troubles until the eighth. Then he had more than his share, finally giving way to Chad Kinsey, fast becoming famous as a relief specialist.

The Browns were leading, 5 to 2, when this frame opened and Stewart did not worry much when Sam Rice opened with a single and Manush followed with a scratch hit. Cronin singled a runner home and advanced Manush to third, however, and Stewart suddenly realized that the game wasn't over yet. He breathed a little easier when Manush was forced at the plate on West's roller, but Bluege beat out a high bounder and the sacks were loaded.

Dave Harris Delivers Hit in Pinch.

Here Dave Harris was given a chance to leap into the limelight, and he did so with both feet. With two strikes on him, he poled one toward the stands in right center. The runners had to hold up to see whether or not the ball would be caught, but it hit the base of the stands just a foot or so over Jenkins' head. Cronin scored, but Coach Schacht held West at third. This caused a traffic jam on the runways, with Harris trapped between first and second. While the Browns were running him down, West scurried home with the tying run.

Spencer came through with a one-baser to drive Bluege home, took second on Melillo's bad peg to the plate, and the Nats became 2 up when Hadley shot a line single to right to score his battery mate. This latter blow was made off of the slants of Relief Pitcher Kimsey, who also yielded an unneeded marker in the ninth.

Marberry Wastes 2-Run Lead.

Fred Marberry drew the starting assignment, but he was neither very bad nor very good. His mates gave him a two-run lead in the second, when a walk and singles by West, Bluege and Spencer were put to good use, while the Browns got these runs back with interest in the third.

It was none other than Goose Goslin who did most of the damage. With two out, Levey and Burns singled and then Goslin poled a homer over the stands in right-center. This was followed by successive doubles off the bats of Kress and Jenkins, which netted a fourth run in the round.

The Browns coined what proved to be their final run in the fifth, the result of Levy's single, a force-play, Burns' theft, and Goslin's single, this making the fourth run driven in by the former "Wild Goose of the Potomac."

Marberry was withdrawn here and Irving Hadley pitched shutout ball

Herrman Defeats Burrows In Chevy Chase Golf Final

Gains Title by 5 and 4 in Battle of Public Links Graduates; Lunn and Eynon Eliminated in Semifinals.

By HENRY LITCHFIELD WEST.

THE rapidly increasing contingent of public links golfers came into their own yesterday on the Chevy Chase course when James D. Herrman, a graduate of the public links, and Bradley H. Burrows, a member of the Washington public links team, met in the final round of the club's spring invitation golf tournament. Herrman defeated Burrows on the fourteenth green, 5 and 4.

By running down a 20-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the eighteenth green Herrman was enabled to reach the finals by defeating Everett Eynon, champion of the Columbia Club. Burrows, out in the semifinal round, disposed of Richard H. Lunn, the 16-year-old member of Burning Tree, on the fifteenth green, 4 and 3.

A large gallery of East Potomac Park and Rock Creek Park players, enthusiastic because Burrows had survived to the final round, followed the afternoon match, but they witnessed an uphill battle for their favorite almost from the start.

Burrows Wins Only First and Tenth

Burrows won the first hole when Herrman missed a 14-inch putt, but Burrows did not win another hole until the tenth, and these two holes were the only ones to his credit from the first drive until the last putt was holed.

Several features were noticeable during the match—first, that on very few par 4 holes were the players able to reach the green in the regulation two strokes, and, second, that the new ball exhibited a persistent tendency to lip the cup and fail to drop. This was very evident on the first three holes. In addition, there were more than the usual number of stymies, one on the fourth preventing Herrman from winning and one on the sixth. On the latter hole, however, Herrman, with a mashie niblick, overcame the stymie and pitched the ball into the cup, a feat which was heartily applauded.

Herrman's drive to the ninth green, giving him a par 3 and a win; Burrows' fine chip shot out of a trap on the tenth, which won the hole for him with a single putt; Herrman's skillful manipulation of his mashie niblick on the sixth green, and Burrows' long and straight brassy shot on the eleventh, which carried his ball to the edge of the green, were some of the outstanding features of a round that was otherwise lacking in thrills.

Burrows' Drives Find Rough.

Burrows had four drives into the rought on the first nine and was not putting well and these were the principal factors in his defeat. On the fifth hole, after playing his third shot out of a trap across the green, he picked up, but an approximate 6 was placed upon his card.

Herrman was 3 up at the turn, but lost the tenth. With the eleventh halved, he won the twelfth when Burrows missed a short putt; won the thirteenth by reaching the green from the tee, with Burrows slicing far to the right, and won the fourteenth when Burrows played his second shot into a trap. The cards:

Out—
Herrman	6	5	5	4	4	5	4	5	3—41
Burrows	5	6	5	4	6	5	5	5	5—46
In—
Herrman	5	5	4	3	4
Burrows	3	5	5	4	5

The experience of J. Monro Hunter, jr., Indian Spring, was rather unusual. On the first day of match play he lost one 19-hole match and won another 19-hole match. Yesterday morning he won a 20-hole match from Maj. Naiden, only to lose the consolation prize in the afternoon when, after being 2 up at the fourteenth hole, he lost to Harry G. Pitt on the final green.

Winner Played With Dayton Team.

Herrman, the winner of the tournament, is 27 years old and has been secretary to Representative Fitzgerald, of Dayton, Ohio, who was defeated at the last election. He played on the Dayton Public Links Team in 1924 and in 1924 and 1925 won the city championship on the Commu-

Wins 8 of 10 Rounds in Giving Giant Foe Boxing Lesson.

By EDWARD J. NEIL.

MADISON SQUARE GARDEN, New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Tommy Loughran, of Philadelphia, won a ten-round decision over Victorio Campolo, of Argentina, tonight and so climbed back to the place he held among the heavyweights two years ago, before Jack Sharkey sent him stumbling around the Yankee Stadium ring looking for a place to sit down.

Tommy, weighing 184, took Victorio, 232½ pounds of long, lean animation, 6 feet 7 inches in height—and gave him as fancy a lacing as any that has been meted out in the big battle pit this season. He did everything except knock out the Argentinian. He won the unanimous decision of Referee Jed Gahan and two judges and at least eight of the ten rounds.

Forced to Reach For Giant's Jaw.

Once more, despite the amazing physical advantage of the giant South American, Loughran was the master of the light heavyweight days. He had to reach up almost a foot t find Campolo's jaw and when Victorio's left was stretched straight out, Tommy, at the end of it, was almost half way across the ring.

Loughran almost as a native son, gasped at the discrepancies in physique and then promptly forgot them as Tommy went to work on the gawky Gaucho. Tommy got away to a bad start as Victorio rushed him around the ring, belting both hands for the body, but once the former light heavyweight king got his bearings, it was an even gaited, impressive parade to the finish.

Dazzles Campolo With Lefts.

Loughran reached up and dazzled Campolo with left jabs to the face. He caught the Argentine's wide nose on the end of the left glove and kept it there. In between times, he slipped Victorio's attempts to jab over one shoulder and plastered the Argentine with left hooks to the head and body. When Campolo thundered in with right slams to the side Tommy took them and shot over right crosses that had the bushy haired giant rocking back on his heels after the second round.

Loughran, by his victory, eliminated the last heavyweight standing between him and recognition once more as in the class of Max Schmeling, Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling. He now stands forth as an added starter in the heavyweight sweepstakes planned as a means this summer of solving the scrambled championship situation.

Twenty Grand Still Choice Over Mate as West Pins Hopes on Long-Shot Group

Sande, in Radio Role, Predicts 2-Horse Race

Louisville, Ky., May 15 (A.P.).—Earle Sande, the great little jockey who rode his third Kentucky Derby winner last year astride Gallant Fox, will occupy the role of a radio broadcaster tomorrow, describing the prerace scenes in the paddock.

"It looks like a two-horse race to me—Mate and Twenty Grand," said Sande today. "Mate should be even better than in winning the Preakness, and will be hard to beat.

"It makes me a little homesick not to figure on riding a horse tomorrow. I had my first Derby mount back in 1918, and I've ridden about seven altogether.

"It's an unusual thing that not a jockey listed for tomorrow's race has ever won a Derby."

Stretch Duel Looms With Equipoise as Third Choice.

Attendance Is Hit by Hard Times But Race Will Draw 50,000.

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor).

LOUISVILLE, May 15 (A.P.).—Dominated by the East's aristocrats of the turf, a field of fifteen 3-year-olds was named today for the fifty-seventh running of the Kentucky Derby.

With one or two possible exceptions, subject to withdrawal, they will bound out of the starting gate late tomorrow afternoon, send the pulses of perhaps 60,000 spectators soaring and fight it out in a race that most every one expects to wind up in a stretch duel between Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand and Albert C. Bostwick's Mate, the cofavorites.

To the winner of America's most colorful classic of the turf will go approximately $50,000 of the $60,000 stake, the famous gold trophy, the roses, the 3-year-old crown for the time-being and the acclaim of a notable gathering of enthusiasts, including Charles Curtis, Vice President of the United States.

Hard Times Hit Crowd And Betting.

Hard times have cut down the influx of visitors sharply and forced most of the betting folk to the $2 windows. There has been nothing like the prerace jams of prosperous years in business and sport, but the prospect of a spectacular race, with plenty to speculate about in advance, has stirred the blood of the thousands of horse lovers who will be there tomorrow.

The shift to warm and sunny weather, too, has brightened the spirits of the crowd, besides forecasting the probability of a dry, fast track and a brilliant picture at the Downs in all its colorful aspects for the first time in four years.

Although general public interest has focused on the chances of Mate adding the Derby prize to his Preakness laurels, or of Twenty Grand's prospect of turning the tables on the Bostwick star, Westerners in general, and Kentuckians in particular have not abandoned hope of one of their long shots coming through.

Entry Reigns Choice Over Mate.

Twenty Grand, the handsome bay son of St. Germans, coupled with Anchors Aweigh and Surf Board as the Greentree Stable entry, held firm today at 2 to 1 in the wagering. Mate was quoted by some of the talent at the same figure, but by others as a second choice at 5 to 2.

Two other Eastern contenders, Walter J. Salmon's Ladder and Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney's Equipoise, the former favorite, were braceted as the third choice at approximately 8 to 1. This gave Westerners a chance to seize some juicy prices in backing a number of their favorites, including T. E.

TWENTY GRAND AND MATE HEAD DERBY FIELD OF 15

Five of Field Seen as Doubtful Starters on Fast Track.

Curtis Among Throng of 50,000 to Turn Out in Fair Weather.

the last two weeks the winter book favorite, might not have had azoturia, a kidney ailment credited with causing his poor showing in the Chesapeake Stakes, when he trailed the winner by 20 lengths.

Trainer Hopkins said that Dr. Collins, of Benning, near Washington, examined Equipoise after the Chesapeake race and asserted that the horse did not have azoturia. Equipoise trained on from the Chesapeake so well that Hopkins hoped he might regain his 2-year-old form when he became the highest money winner of his age. In the Preakness Equipoise was fourth.

Hopkins isn't so sure Equipoise will be at top form for tomorrow's race. He hopes for the best, but refuses to say the colt is in first-class shape.

"Equipoise will be retired until the racing at Saratoga," said Hopkins, "if he does not win the Derby or run the race we think worthy of him."

Leading Candidates Sized Up.

In a nutshell the leading Derby contenders size up about as follows:

Twenty Grand: The horse to beat.

Mate: Preakness winner and very dangerous.

Pittsburgher: West's big hope.

Equipoise: Mystery horse of the race.

Sweep All: Has an outside chance to get into the money, but hardly a contender for first or second.

Ladder: Third in Preakness and has some good workouts behind him.

Boys Howdy—The long-shot players like this one.

Spanish Play—A winter track horse that may have another good race in him.

Included in the colorful crowd which will see tomorrow's race will be Vice President Curtis, governors of nine States, Mayor Jimmy Walker of New York and Mayor Anton Cermak, to say nothing of the host of horse lovers, touts, bookmakers and just ordinary folks who want to see a Derby with their own eyes.

TRACK FAST FOR DERBY FIELD

Mueller's Pittsburgher and Charles Fisher's Sweep All, each at 15 to 1; H. C. Hatch's Boys Howdy, the Cuban Derby winner; Knebelkamp & Morris' Spanish Play, the Louisiana Derby victor, and Griffin Watkin's Insco, each at 20 to 1.

Pittsburgher Chief Kentucky Hope.

Among the "hard boots" and around the stables here and in Lexington today, the boys who eat and sleep with the horses, played the hunch that Pittsburgher, the Big Train, would spring a big surprise on the Easterners and win. The son of In Memoriam is the chief Kentucky hope, though the experts concede good winning chances to Insco, Sweep All and Boys Howdy. The latter was bred at the Idle Hour Farm of Edward R. Bradley, whose colors will be missing from the Derby for the first time in years.

AMASSING the grand total of three hits, all of them singles, Central yesterday afternoon assured itself of at least second place in the high school series by defeating Business by the amazing score of 13-11. Business hit safely nine times, but alienated the benefits of this by leaving their runners on bases, committing six errors and giving free passes to first base to twelve Centralites.

Including the players, exactly 43 spectators witnessed the final appearance in the series of both teams. It was a fairly raggedly played game.

Bill Duryee went the route for Business, and besides walking twelve men struck out the same number and hit safely thrice in five times at bat.

Uhle Defeats Yankees, 2-0, With Arm and Bat

Detroit, Mich., May 15 (A.P.).—George Uhle, Detroit righthander, made a great occasion of his first start of the season today, holding the hard hitting New York Yankees to five hits and leading the way in batting to a 2-to-0 triumph for the Tigers.

Not one of the Yankee's hits was for an extra base. Uhle himself began Herb Pennock's downfall, driving out a double in the sixth inning and scoring on Owens' single. Alexander doubled to bring home Owen with the second run.

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS —By John Hix

Although there is no U. S. Navy Regulation prohibiting whistling, custom has established that there shall be no whistling aboard ship, and this custom has been written into ships' regulations.

This is because of the possibility of mistaking a whistle for the notes of a bo'sn's pipe, which might endanger life where personnel was involved in hoisting or lowering away heavy weights.

Originally seamen of sailing ships held the superstition that whistling brought on storms, and for that reason whistling was a punishable offense, especially on board small sailing craft.

A. A. U. MAT HONORS AT STAKE

WHAT the amateurs know of the art of grunt and grimace will be demonstrated tonight at the Jewish Community Center when 36 Simon-pures of various Capital schools and clubs compete for eight class titles. It is the first wrestling championship tournament sponsored by the District of Columbia Association of the A. A. U. The boys will begin applying their "holts" promptly at 7:15.

Yesterday all but three of the contestants passed the weighing-in test on the scales at the Center. The other three did not appear, but were given a day of grace by Jim McNamara, chairman of the committee in charge. On account of this delay the pairings will not be made until this evening shortly before the bouts start.

The field represents six schools and clubs, as follows: Georgetown University, Y. M. C. A., National Training School, Boys Club, College Park A. C., and Jewish Community Center.

The titles to be contested are 115, 125, 135, 145, 155, 165, 175 and unlimited. Decisions will be made on the consensus of three judges.

French, Pirates, Wins Over Giants in 10th, 3-2

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—In the only game of their series which escaped being rained or frozen out, the Pittsburgh Pirates took a ten-inning decision from the Giants today by a 3-to-2 score.

Larry French, Pirate southpaw, had the edge on the giant veteran, Clarence Mitchell, in a mound duel. He allowed ten hits and Mitchell eleven, three of which came in the tenth inning. Each team took the lead once in the regular time.

George Grantham scored the winning runs, touching Mitchell for a double and coming home on Pie Traynor's single.

MARYLAND U. BEATEN BY V. M. I., 7-5

Milburn Is Ineffective as Cadets Rally to Triumph.

HARRY MILBURN, ace of Coach Shipley's pitching staff, had an off-day yesterday and Maryland's last chance to go places in the Tri-State League of the Southern Conference went rattling far, far away off the bats of the Virginia Military Institute hitters.

V. M. I., by virtue of its 7-to-5 triumph, gained second place in the standings, while Maryland fell back to third. Had Milburn and his mates come through with a win, Maryland today would be close behind North Carolina University, the leader, with a chance to capture the championship in the event of a North Carolina loss next week to N. C. State. As it was Maryland's last league game, the result definitely puts the Old Liners out of the running.

STOCK PRICES DROP SLIGHTLY IN SELLING

90 Issues Record Average 1.7 Lower in Turnover of 2,400,000 Shares.

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Little change occurred today in the character of trading in the security markets. Selling of stocks was concentrated against U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors, American Telephone and the rails, giving an impression of acute weakness which, however, was not so apparent in many less prominent issues.

Trading in stocks expanded to 2,400,000 shares, the largest turnover in a week. The market's recent pattern was followed rather closely with the notable exception of a late rally instead of a late decline. Final prices averaged 1.7 lower, bringing the price index of 90 representative shares to 114.7 compared with the year's low of 114.1.

If the bears have par as their objective for Steel common, they came within 1¼ points of their goal. The industrial leader touched 103¾ in a large turnover, closing at 103¼, off 2⅝. American Can's low was 100⅝, its closing quotation 102¾ and the net loss 2¼. American Telephone dropped to 176½ against the year's minimum of 176⅛, but its extreme decline of 2⅜ was reduced to ⅞.

General Motors Lose.

General Motors, selling ex-dividend, broke below 40 before steadying and was down 1⅝ on the day. Rails, with few exceptions, touched new lows. There were scattering recoveries, notably in New York Central, Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio. Atchison lost 3 net, Union Pacific 2, and New Haven nearly 4. Missouri Pacific preferred rallied 3 on the dividend declaration.

Chemicals were weak most of the day. Oils traded inconspicuously. Standard of New Jersey, which reported 1930 earnings equivalent to $1.65 a share against $4.75 in 1929, more than made up the dividend which was taken from the price of the stock today. Metals, with the exception of International Nickel, which made a new low, were quiet. Auburn had a wide break, but got back most of its loss. International Business Machines and Austrian Credit Anstalt slumped sharply.

Two developments tending to discourage foreign funds from this market came to light during the day. One was a reduction in the Federal Reserve Bank's buying rate for foreign correspondents' bills, the other an informal reduction of one-half a per cent in the interest rate allowed by clearing house banks of foreign time deposits.

Sterling Exchange Rises.

The latter step was unusual, in that only the other day the clearing house took no action on cutting rates paid domestic customers. One immediately apparent result was a rally in sterling exchange.

Seasonal influences were at work in business during the week, according to the commercial reviews and some contraction was noted. Bradstreet's said the weather had retarded retail trade, although it had been helpful to crops. Dun's commodity price index showed more declines than advances, with food prices working higher. The same review reported a further decrease in business failures.

Cotton was heavy, July breaking more than 83 a bale under the top of last week's advance. All active months touched new seasonal lows, and final prices were near the bottom, representing net losses of 9 to 14 points. Wheat was firm in the absence of rain in the Northwest and unfavorable crop reports from Texas and Oklahoma. Corn, however, sagged fractionally, affected by an easy Buenos Ayres market and a bearish weather forecast.

Aside from the improvement in sterling and firmness in Latin-Americans, foreign exchanges varied slightly. There was mild easiness in the German mark.

Meat Shipping Break Denied.

Chicago, May 15 (A.P.).—Charles H. Swift, vice president of Campania Swift Internacional, said today, with reference to brokerage reports of an alleged break-up of the shipping conference having to do with the meat situation in South America: "There is no change in the situation, nor do we know of any likely to occur. The shipping conference runs on indefinitely and is cancelable only on 12 months' notice."

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, May 15 (A.P.).—Fears that Canadian drought conditions would be intensified and harvest yields would suffer gave an upward trend to wheat prices today. Only scattered showers in Canada were reported, and the outlook was for rainless skies, high temperatures and renewal of dust storms. Average rainfall since April 1 in the prairie provinces, Canada's main wheat belt, was reported as only 0.28 to 0.69 inch, compared with 1.81 to 2.70 inches this time last year.

Wheat closed nervous, unchanged to ½ cent higher, corn unchanged to ¾ down, oats unchanged to ¼ off, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents decline.

Anxiety over likelihood of serious curtailment of the Canadian crop dominated wheat most of the day, despite price reactions which at times resulted from unsettled stock market conditions and from prospects of rain in domestic spring wheat territory. Advices indicated that especially in large areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan the moisture supply remained inadequate. Attention was also given to Kansas reports that wheat was not good on light rolling clay soil and on heavy soil recently wet and cold, both these soils being somewhat crusted. There were reports, also, that traces of black rust had been found in Oklahoma wheat.

Wheat price upturns which followed an early sag were associated with reports that drought districts in Canada, large areas of Alberta and Saskatchewan provinces especially, remained without adequate moisture.

Bulls in wheat made much of the Canadian forecast, pointing to mostly fair and warm weather, conditions likely to intensify drought and to renew dust blowing. Word that traces of black rust had been found in Oklahoma wheat aroused interest, but had no appreciable market effect. Corn and oats followed the action of wheat.

Provisions receded owing to liberal stocks on hand.

BOND GAINS SLACKEN IN CHANGING TREND

Strength in Prices Holds for Gilt-Edge Issues as Foreign Loans Lose.

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Activity in bonds slackened today, and prices moved irregularly with strength concentrated in the gilt-edge obligations. Some issues of secondary standing held steady but many of them made varying declines.

Many of the widest losses were recorded by foreign obligations. Declines of 1 to 2 points were fairly common among German, Chilean, Argentine and Brazilian issues, and fractionally lower prices occurred in many other foreign loans.

The action of gilt-edge issues contrasted sharply with this weakness. Several obligations of the United States Government reached new 1931 top prices and some others equaled their old peaks. The Liberty fourth 4¼s, which reached a new peak, were the only really active bonds of this group.

Higher grade corporate bonds like American Telephone debenture 5s of 1965, Atchison adjustment 4s, New York Edison 6½s, New York Telephone general 4½s, Reading series A 4½s and Kansas Gas & Electric 4½s closed higher and some of them reached new peak levels.

With the exception of these and similar issues other corporate obligations were usually lower, although in many instances the declines were narrow. A few secondary bonds ended the day unchanged.

Government officials of Newfoundland will receive bids on May 22 for $8,000,000 bonds, or the equivalent in sterling figured at $4.8665 to the pound, for 5 per cent coupon bonds due in 1956.

The Austrian National Council has voted to issue treasury bonds to aid the Austrian credit anstalt, according to dispatches from Paris. The Bank for International Settlements has agreed to place part of the issue abroad.

PERSONNEL URGED AS BANKERS' ASSET

John Poole Tells Meeting at Atlantic City How to Train Employes.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Bankers should take human inventories of themselves, their executives and employes as well as business inventories. This was the advice of President John Poole, Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co., given in a speech yesterday before the New Jersey Bankers Association at Atlantic City. With the passing of time, he told its members, human beings, as well as merchandise, get full of cobwebs, rusty, shelf-worn and, too frequently, terribly out of date and out of style, with resultant diminished values.

Addressing his audience on "The Selection and Training of Personnel," Mr. Poole remarked that while many executives and employes have that "something" that carries men through to success, there are others who have had it and lost it and some who never knew what it was.

"Take stock of yourself and employes regularly," he said. "Study the prevalent public relations policies of your bank; make sure that in man power your bank is keeping apace with others; that it is a 1931 model in 1931."

Personnel Training Urged.

After explaining in a thorough and interesting manner the program of personnel training in his own institution and commending the aid of the American Institute of Banking in this matter, Mr. Poole said: "Somehow, we like to get across the idea to our young men that instead of their being clerks, controlled by a boss, they are in business for themselves, and through the officers, the bank is their customer, buying what each one has to sell. For instance, the bank is buying so many hours of service. It is also buying personality, disposition, enthusiasm and industry. Indeed, we are buying their mental and physical output. Therefore, in the final analysis, each one is in business for himself, with power and success gravitating to those who make themselves most valuable.

"If I had the choice of two young men for a vacant job, both willing to report on time every morning, both willing to stay every day until the work is done, both equally accurate and dependable, I should take the one with personality and enthusiasm.

Better Pay Advised.

"If the work done was worth $100 a month, I should rather pay $25 or $50 more to the better man. That's what I term 'internal advertising.' That's the place inside the bank where, in my opinion, the first advertising money should be spent—on the personnel.

"I am glad to be talking to this particular group," he said in closing, "for you men are big men; the successful and highly respected bankers of your communities. But while your power and influence is very great today, it has not always been so. Time was—and not so long ago either—when you were boys and young men, and you had bosses over you—and then there were other boys—many of them.

"No one but God Himself knew how many of that old crowd would turn out, and certainly many of them never did come through—that is to say, never came through big—never achieved distinction. But somehow the future beckoned you on. Somebody took an interest in you. Somebody backed you. Somebody encouraged you. Somebody said you had the makings—somebody trusted you and gave you a chance.

"If such interest and confidence stimulated and encouraged you when you were young—surely the same sort of interest in the boys in your employ will make men out of some of them."

Deputy Comptroller of the Currency F. G. Awalt was another speaker at the convention.

Foreign Deposits Rate Reduced in New York

New York, May 15 (A.P.).—Another evidence of easiness in the money market appeared today in the announcement that an informal committee of bankers had reduced the interest rate on foreign time deposits in New York banks from 2 to 1½ per cent, kept here for periods running from 30 days to six months.

The lower rate becomes effective on May 18. The rate on demand deposits remains unchanged at 1 per cent. These rates are not governed by the maximum interest rates imposed by the Clearing House on its member banks. Foreign deposits here are estimated at apprpoximately $1,000,000,000.

Breckenridge Gets Legion Post's Vote

Special to The Washington Post.

Leesburg, Va., May 15.—Loudoun Post of the American Legion, in session here last night, indorsed H. G. Breckenridge, former commander of the local post and present State commander, for commander of the American Legion, Department of Virginia. The election is to take place at the annual convention of the legion in Clifton Forge, August 24. May 23 to 30 was fixed by the post as the period for the sale of poppies in Loudoun.

Two members of the post, Harry G. Breckenridge and S. H. Grimes, jr., post commander, have been presented with patriots' cards by the national commander, commending them for performing an act of patriotism to the Nation in time of depression by obtaining work for at least one unemployed person.

Vice Commander Breckenridge has rendered conspicuous service in the interest of former service men in Loudoun. Post officials estimate that through his efforts more than $15,000 in back compensation has been secured for service men here. His district leads the entire State in the matter of membership.

Three to Be Whipped For Stealing Turkeys

Wilmington, Del., May 15 (A.P.).—Three men from Henderson, Md., pleaded guilty today to charges of stealing turkeys from the farm of Mrs. Sophia Summ at Townsend, Del., last December and were sentenced to be whipped in the New Castle County workhouse and to be imprisoned there six months each.

Wendall Shockley and Hiram Bright will be given ten lashes each and Austin Bright fifteen.

Ticket Limit Hits Virginia Bus Lines

Carriers Within State Not Allowed Exchange With Unregulated Ones.

Richmond, Va., May 15 (A.P.).—The State Corporation Commission today banned the interchange of tickets between bus carriers operating under Virginia law and interstate carriers operating without State or national regulation.

The commission, through Chairman Hooker, wrote to all Virginia passenger bus operators informing them that intrastate lines may not sell tickets over lines operating between Virginia and other States, and may not honor tickets of interstate lines without penalty of fine or revocation of certificate.

The order affects Virginia lines connected with systems extending outside the State, as well as lines with systems confined within the Virginia borders.

Chairman Hooker's letter followed hearing of evidence in the rule against the Old Dominion stages to show cause why the company should not be punished for the alleged operation of intrastate business on an interstate permit. This case has not yet been decided.

Historic Houses Open to Visitors

Secial to The Washington Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 15.—A rare opportunity will be given visitors to Fredericksburg next Saturday, when many guests are expected to take advantage of the opening of nine old homes to the public for the benefit of Richmond and Fredericksburg Chapters, U. D. C.

This same opportunity was given last year, and the affair was an unqualified success, guests coming from many places to enjoy a glimpse of lovely old homes, many never before opened for anything but social calls from friends.

Among these is the home of Commodore Matthew Fontaine Maury, a bust of whom recently was unveiled in the Hall of Fame in New York.

LIBERAL ATTITUDE INDICATED BY NEW TRAFFIC DIRECTOR

Van Duzer Says Washington Must Not Impose Too Many Regulations.

ROAD-BUILDERS HONOR RETIRING EXECUTIVE

Dinner Guests Hear Capital Problems Outlined by T. H. MacDonald.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

William A. Van Duzer, who will become Washington's director of the newly-created Department of Vehicles and Traffic on July 1, last night gave his first intimation of the policies that will guide him when he declared the National Capital can not afford to take an isolated, provincial attitude in the solution of its traffic problem.

On the contrary, he said, as an ever more appealing city not only to its own residents but also to every American citizen, Washington must impose no restrictions upon the freest possible use of its streets by the largest number of vehicles.

This statement of contemplated policy was given by Mr. Van Duzer to a representative of The Washington Post last night following the annual dinner of the American Road Builders Association. In giving voice to his intention upon taking office, Mr. Van Duzer affirmed the opinion expressed by Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads, who spoke at the dinner on the responsibilities that will face the new director of vehicles and traffic.

Dinner Honored Van Duzer.

The dinner, held in the large ballroom of the new Willard Hotel, was given in honor of Mr. Van Duzer as retiring president of the American Road Builders Association. The event, attended by 400 persons, including District Commissioners Herbert B. Crosby and Maj. John C. Gotwals and others high in social and official life, served also as Mr. Van Duzer's formal introduction to the National Capital.

In his brief address at the dinner, Mr. Van Duzer made no reference to his new position, but contended himself with reviewing the year's work of the American Road Builders Association, declared by others on the program to have been the most successful year in the organization's history.

Expressing reluctance to make any formal statement as to his policies here until he actually takes office July 1, Mr. Van Duzer told the representatives of The Post that the Washington traffic area must be regarded as including nearby Maryland and Virginia areas. At present he is engaged in making studies for the Park and Planning Commission of the entire metropolitan area. In this he is working in cooperation with the Bureau of Public Roads, the chief of which, Mr. MacDonald, told the diners of Washington's traffic needs.

Van Duzer's Task Held Difficult.

"Those of us who live in Washington," he said, "must realize that it is not our city only, but that of every American citizen. Its beauties in the form of public buildings, historic edifices, parks and other points of interest must be made as free and accessible to visitors as it is possible to make them.

"It is a difficult task that confronts Mr. Van Duzer in helping to make them so. It is one in which he will need the support of every agency and every individual in this room."

Affirming Mr. MacDonald's conception of Washington's obligations to outsiders as well as to local residents, Mr. Van Duzer assured the representative of The Post no interest would fail to get consideration and a full hearing in the solution of the city's traffic problems. Sound and well-considered, rather than hasty action will be his objective in every recommendation for any traffic regulation changes.

New President Introduced.

Gen. Albert Cox acted as toastmaster at the dinner. Other than Mr. Van Duzer and Mr. MacDonald, he introduced as speakers, William R. Smith, the former's successor as president of the American Road Builders Association, Charles E. Lofgren, member of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition, and Carveth Wells.

Among those present to bid Mr. Van Duzer an affectionate farewell as president of the association and to wish him well in his new duties as traffic director of the District of Columbia were representatives of fifteen countries of the Americas together with officials of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, the Highway Education Board, the American Motorists Association and the Pennsylvania Highway Department.

Seller of Narcotics Is Sentenced to Jail

Nicholas Passero, who with Frank Levine was found guilty of violating the Harrison narcotic laws two weeks ago, was sentenced to serve six months on each of four counts in the indictment under which he was tried. Levine was given five years last week, because of a previous record of convictions of the narcotic law.

Passero was ill when Levine came up for sentence and his case went over a week. Narcotic agents testified Passero was with Levine on three occasions when sales were made. They declared Passero did not sell the drugs, but Justice Gordon held that his presence on each sale was sufficient.

The child's skull was fractured. Neither of her parents nor Mrs. Louis Farrell and her two children, who were, with the Greys, was seriously injured.

In addition to their four daughters and two sons, a number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. Edwards gathered to pay honor to the couple.

ADKINS OVERRULES MISTRIAL MOTIONS IN BLACKMAIL CASE

Defense Bases Two Pleas on Testimony Offered by U. S. Agent.

TRIAL IS ADJOURNED TO TUESDAY MORNING

Reference to Standing of Defendant Results in First Objection.

Two motions by defense counsel that a mistrial be declared were overruled yesterday by Justice Jesse C. Adkins before whom five persons are on trial in the District Supreme Court under indictments charging them with a conspiracy to blackmail Capt. and Mrs. Clarence C. Calhoun.

Both mistrial motions were based on statements made from the witness stand by Samuel W. Hardy, Department of Justice agent, the principal witness presented by the prosecution. Mr. Hardy, who began his testimony Thursday, was still on the stand, under cross-examination, when Justice Adkins adjourned the trial in the afternoon until 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Asked by Richard L. Merrick, of defense counsel, if he had made any effort to learn or had any knowledge of the standing of W. Clark Noble, one of the defendants, as a sculptor, Mr. Hardy took from his pocket a newspaper clipping and read the headline which declared that "sculptor wrathfully quits motherhood drive." Charles Arth, another of defense counsel, objected, but Justice Adkins overruled his plea for a mistrial.

Second Demand Is Overruled.

Mr. Merrick attempted to force Mr. Hardy to admit that some of the statements he swore to at a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage were not of his own personal knowledge, finally asking the witness whether he believed the defendants guilty at that time.

"I did," replied Mr. Hardy with emphasis.

"And you still believe them to be guilty, don't you?" interjected Irvin Goldstein, assistant United States district attorney prosecuting the case.

"I do," Mr. Hardy assured him before defense counsel had time to do anything about it and there was a second demand for a mistrial. This, too, was overruled, Justice Adkins instructing the jury to disregard the exchange, which amounted only to lawyer's repartee, and defense counsel also took exception to his instructions.

Mr. Merrick attempted to show more interest on the part of Mr. Hardy than would be dictated by ordinary official zeal and asked if he ever had been entertained by Capt. and Mrs. Calhoun after the defendants had been arrested. Three months after the arrests had been made he and his wife were entertained at dinner in the Calhoun home in Braemar Forest, Mr. Hardy said. Subsequently he attended an American Pen Women's party in the Calhoun home, he said, adding that he had paid admission to the affair.

Conference Is Described.

Mr. Hardy told of the conference held in the office of James F. Bird, another of the defendants, at which the five were arrested. The conference was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Noble, Mr. Bird, Mrs. Anna Hillenbrand and Stephen A. Armstrong, jr., and Mrs. E. J. Krouse. Mrs. Krouse was not in the group charged with attempting blackmail.

Both Mr. Bird and Mrs. Armstrong were suspicious of United States deputy marshals waiting in the hall outside, Mr. Hardy said, admitting that he had told Mr. Bird he did not know who they were.

Mr. Bird did not like the contract he had prepared and tore it in half and a substitute contract was offered. He believed Mr. Bird objected to the paper first offered him because it contained his name, Mr. Hardy said.

An agreement, torn in half, was identified by Mr. Hardy when shown it by Mr. Goldstein, as the one which was torn by Mr. Bird when the marshals entered his office to make arrests.

JUDGE BARS VERDICT ATTACK BY JUROR IN PROHIBITION TRIALS

Claim of Illness Disputed; Court Says Panel Denies Abusing Member.

13 MEN AND 2 WOMEN ARE GIVEN SENTENCES

Man and Wife Released on Probation After Pleading Guilty to Charges.

Refusing to "allow the jury to impeach the jury's verdict" Justice Oscar Luhring yesterday discarded statements of three members of the jury that sat in the liquor conspiracy trial two weeks ago. The justice made known his decision when the thirteen men and two women came before him in his court to receive sentence.

At the same time, Justice Luhring declared: "In reference to that Juror Cooling, I noticed him from the moment he was selected, as a lawyer or a court would do in looking over a jury.

"Personally, I would never have accepted that fellow as a juror had I been representing the Government. I noticed him through the whole trial, especially during the arguments, and, of course, I observed him particularly when he came in.

Illness Is Disputed.

"And he did not appear to be ill to me. He did not appear to be dazed, as he charged. And I might say to you, gentlemen, I am not at all surprised at the statement that Cooling made, the signed statement. To me that statement looked exactly like him. I was not surprised at that."

Cooling had signed a statement in which he declared he was ill and dazed during the jury deliberations.

Alfred Mendelson and Milton Lerner were sentenced to serve two years each and pay fines of $5,000. Roy Beasley, Harry Kushner and Thomas McNichols were given eighteen months and fined $2,500 each. Corbin Shields, Edward T. Coughan and Jack Baum got fifteen months. Andrew Lebolo and Frank A. Baker were sentenced to serve four months.

James P. Clarke, who with his wife, Nettie, pleaded guilty, was sentenced to eighteen months and a $2,500 fine. His sentence was suspended and he was placed on probation.

Wife's Sentence Suspended.

His wife got a suspended sentence of a year and a day, and Mrs. Elizabeth Charteres, who with her husband, Jerry, also pleaded guilty, got a year and a day, with the sentence being suspended. The husband was sentenced to fifteen months, which was suspended and probation allowed.

The case attracted unusual attention when Assistant United States Attorneys James Kirkland and John J. Wilson claimed that the operations of the ring were mounting at a rate that would have gone to $1,000,000 a year.

After the trial three jurors signed statements which were filed by defense attorneys in an attempt to get a new trial. The Government countered with nine affidavits from the other jurors, in which it was claimed that there was no coercion or violence, and that there was no illness other than a pair of aching feet and a headache.

All those sentenced were remanded to jail to begin their sentences.

Columbia Group Ends Season With Prize Play

The Columbia Players closed their season at the Wilson Normal School auditorium last night with the second presentation of "Hell Bent Fer Heaven," Pulitzer prize play.

How human passions may distort the principles of religion toward evil ends was convincingly illustrated by Robert Chase's interpretation of the part of Rufe. Willard Miller, Aurora Poston, Orris Holland, Phillip Cole and Wilma Wright all gave good performances. The play was directed by Orris Holland.

Health Department Asks Huge Increase

Budget Estimates for 1933 Almost Triple Figure Allowed for 1932; Contagious Disease Hospital Requested, Costing $600,000.

Estimates of the Health Department for 1933 are almost triple the 1932 appropriation, chiefly because of the request for a contagious disease hospital and proposals to improve considerably the medical, dental, and nursing service in the schools, according to figures released yesterday by Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor.

An increase of $61,810 is asked for the hygiene and sanitation work of the schools by Health Officer William C. Fowler, who points out in his report to the District Commissioners that this service is at present inadequate.

Ten additional medical inspectors, a supervising nurse, twelve nurses, four dental operators, two dental preparatory operators, and a clerk are requested for the schools at an added salary cost of $52,580. Establishment of two additional dental clinics is proposed.

An estimate of $600,000 is given for the proposed contagious disease hospital, which would be erected on the grounds occupied by Gallinger Hospital and other District institutions. This figure is based, it is explained, on an estimated cost of $4,000 per bed. An institution with 150 beds would be ample for the District needs for some years, Dr. Fowler sets forth. An additional $60,000 is asked for maintenance of the hospital.

Other new employes asked are four nurses to be used in prevention of contagious diseases, a nurse and a clerk in dispensary work, and a stenographer in the vital statistics division.

Although the trade and civic body representatives this week included the health department among those on which there should be no reductions in estimates, it is expected that the commissioners will do considerable cutting before transmitting the needs to the Budget Bureau. Whether the contagious disease hospital, which has been asked for several years, is retained, is a matter of conjecture.

The total estimate of the Health Department is $1,201,150, an increase of $752,190 over the $448,960 appropriation in the 1932 act.

Estimates for new highways are less than the rather large 1932 appropriation, but the requests for bridges is a great deal more. The street repair work probably will not be reduced much as it is based chiefly on the income from gasoline taxes, but large slicings are likely to be made in the bridge estimate, which is $51,272,500, nearly triple the 1932 appropriation.

Among these proposed spans are the P street bridge over Rock Creek ($300,000), an overpass over Fourteenth street at Potomac Park ($210,000), replacement of the Benning bridge ($400,000), and a start on the new Calvert street bridge ($100,000). A fund of $102,500 is asked for maintenance.

The widening and resurfacing of Constitution avenue is the largest of the street projects. The Federal Government will pay for part of this work.

WITNESS PICTURES MIDNIGHT MEETING WHEN HAYNES QUIT

Examiner Testifies in Trial of Financier Accused of Misapplying Funds.

CASH ITEMS AND DRAFTS HELD TO BE EXCESSIVE

Says Banker Told Group He Tried to Recoup Losses of Woman Client.

A midnight meeting of the board of directors of the Farmers & Mechanics Bank, at which Harry V. Haynes resigned from the presidency after he had been confronted by certain disclosures made by William P. Folger, a bank examiner, in an examination of the bank's books, was pictured to the jury trying Haynes on a charge of misapplying funds yesterday in Justice Peyton Gordon's court.

Mr. Folger said that he had gone to the bank because of "certain information," the nature of which he did not divulge. He said that he found unusual and excessive "cash items" in the bank and that he called the meeting for the night of September 12, 1928, after spending two days in the institution.

Items Shown to Haynes.

At the meeting Haynes was shown "cash items" and drafts totaling many thousands of dollars. One, in fact, was for $33,000 and another was for $29,050. The latter item had a notation that the ticket was for "Mrs. Louise T. Chambers, credit Hibbs & Co." It was signed Harry V. Haynes. When these items were brought to Haynes' attention at the meeting he said that his operations were designed to recoup losses sustained by Mrs. Chambers through following Haynes' advice. Mrs. Chambers has filed suit against Haynes for $280,000.

The "cash items" were declared excessive and unusual and while some of them were three months old, they should have been taken care of within a few days of their inception. A cash item, it was explained, is a paper covering an overdraft.

When court recessed at noon, to convene Monday, District Attorney Rover and his assistant, John J. Wilson, had sent eleven more witnesses before the jury.

Brokerage Men Testify.

James Elgin, a representative of the W. B. Hibbs Brokerage Co.; Donald C. Barnhart, of the Warrington Motor Car Co.; W. C. Smith, customer's man at Hibbs; Paul P. Rodier, cashier of Hibbs; Frank Cane, chief telegrapher of Hibbs; Leo A. Heher, a telegrapher at Hibbs, and Albert Haas, securities clerk at Hibbs, were among the witnesses.

James J. Madden and J. Carl Perry were other witnesses.

For the most part the witnesses were called to identify hand writings and checks. Buy and sell orders for the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, and other documentary evidence were presented through witnesses who could identify the records. The case was adjourned until Monday morning because Justice Gordon had scheduled arraignments and sentences for the afternoon session in his court.

GEORGETOWN OPENS GARDENS TO PUBLIC

Proceeds From Pilgrimage to Beauty Spots Will Go to Charity.

The quaint gardens of Georgetown, usually hidden from public view behind stout brick walls, were thrown open yesterday and today for the annual May pilgrimage, conducted for the purposes of charity.

Funds derived will go to support of a nursery school, a project of the Georgetown Children's Council.

Among gardens open for the first time this year are those on the estate of Robert Woods Bliss, on R street northwest, between Thirty-second and Thirty-first streets.

The 54-acre show place of the Minister to Argentina is usually closed, but this year the great wooden gates swing aside for the pilgrims, allowing them to wander at will along backgrounds of billowy boxwood and beside borders of flame-colored lucifer tulips.

Evermay, estate of F. Lamont Berlin, also attracts crowds to its brick-faced, ivy-cloaked tiers, to terraces commanding a panorama of Washington.

Ruth Hanna McCormick's home of three old houses also attracts the pilgrims.

Historic estates of nearby Maryland also will be opened for trips by the public under auspices of the Chevy Chase Garden Club. This trip, to be taken May 26, will include Arbre-Monte, home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons, and the 170-year-old colonial home of Mr. and Mrs. George Thomas Dunlop. Brook Farm, revolutionary mansion of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Hood Schultz, also will be one of the show spots to be visited.

JURY FAILS TO FIND BRUISES ON GREGORY

Body of Man Drowned While on River Party Found by Fishermen.

A coroner's jury last night viewed the body of Irving Gregory, who was drowned when he went overboard off Fort Foote early Sunday morning, but failed to find any bruises showing that he had been knocked overboard during a fight.

No date for the formal inquest has been set, but it probably will be held some time next week. Prince Georges police last night questioned some witnesses to the death.

The body was found yesterday floating in the river, after harbor police had dragged for it six days without success. Sergt. C. M. Richardson, of Fort Washington, and J. W. Cassidy, of Oxon Hill, who were fishing, saw the body and notified police.

After being taken to the District Morgue, Gregory was identified by relatives. The body will be turned over to them today.

Monte de la Vega, pilot of the boat from which Gregory was lost, was charged with manslaughter, but has been released in bond of $500. One of the two girls on the party told police that Gregory and de la Vega had quarreled, but other members said that the dead man fell overboard while attempting to raise the anchor.

Refused Cigarette, Man Bites Stranger's Ear

Sidney Lucas, 49, was walking peacefully near his home at 337 Missouri avenue northwest yesterday when a man accosted him and asked for a cigarette. Mr. Lucas had no cigarette and said as much, whereupon the stranger wrapped an arm about the former's neck and bit him on the ear.

Mr. Lucas, rather incensed at this informal display of appetite, called police and his alleged assailant, who identified himself as Patrick Gordon, 56, of Second street near New Jersey avenue northwest, was taken away and charged with assault, drunkenness and disorderly conduct. His victim had the ear treated at Casualty Hospital.

Marriage Annulment Is Sought by Girl, 17

Catherine E. McMahon, through her next friend, Henry H. Loreberg, yesterday filed a suit to annul her marriage to William E. McMahon, who is described as living on the military reservation at Fort Myer. The suit says that when the couple went through a ceremony at Annapolis, Md., April 4, of this year, she was too young to enter into a legal marriage.

When the couple returned to this city the girl went to her home and her husband went to Fort Myer, she said. The girl was born in 1914. Neither parent gave consent, the suit charges.

Clubwomen Move To Abolish Begging

Resolution Asks District to Clear Streets of Alms Seekers.

A resolution requesting the District Commissioners to take steps to abolish street begging was adopted yesterday by the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, concluding its thirty-seventh annual meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt. The resolution was presented by Mrs. Harry V. Schnabel, chairman of the division of civic development.

Walter W. Husband, Assistant Secretary of Labor, spoke on immigration at the morning session. "The most interesting thing concerning immigration today," he said, "is that there is practically none." Deportations have increased to such an extent, he said, that in the last four months the number of those being sent out of the country exceeded the number entering the United States.

Musical numbers were given at yesterday's concluding meeting by Mrs. Ellen Shreve, soprano; Mrs. Mildred Couch, piano; Ivalee Newell, violinist, and Mrs. C. Weine, piano.

MOTHER SAYS GANG HELD GIRL CAPTIVE

Ruth Wanamaker Detained in Baltimore Garage by Five Men.

Ruth Wanamaker, 19, who was found in a Baltimore hospital a week after she disappeared from Union Station here, was held a prisoner in a Baltimore garage by five men, according to the girl's foster-mother, Mrs. M. L. Turner, of Berwyn, Md.

Mrs. Turner said that when the girl was found she was clothed only in a torn dress. Her shoes, stockings and underclothes had disappeared. She was not able to talk when Mrs. Turner saw her, but apparently recognized her adopted mother.

Went to Baltimore.

Dr. and Mrs. Turner went to Baltimore yesterday to effect release of the girl from Baltimore City Hospital. Miss Wanamaker, suffering from a sprained ankle and multiple bruises, was removed to Union Memorial Hospital, where her condition is said to be undetermined.

Although the girl is said to remember nothing that happened from the time she disappeared here on May 7 until she was found in Baltimore last Monday, Mrs. Turner was told of the five men by other persons in Baltimore.

According to the story told her, the men were seen entering and leaving a vacant garage in an outlying portion of the city. Monday morning they all left, and a woman living nearby heard screams from the garage. She called police, who released the girl, it is said.

Taken From Union Station.

How the girl was taken from Union Station almost under the eyes of Mrs. Turner has not yet been learned. The two women were awaiting the arrival of Dr. Turner, when Mrs. Turner looked away. She looked back again in less than a minute, Mrs. Turner said, but the girl had disappeared. The waiting room was filled at the time. A couple sitting nearby was questioned, but had seen nothing, they said. However, their answers to other questions were later proved false, Mrs. Turner said.

When found, Miss Wanamaker was unable to talk to police. She was found to be penniless, however, and was sentenced to serve three months as a vagrant. After hearing her story from the Turners, she was released.

Dr. and Mrs. Turner plan to go to Baltimore early next week to investigate the alleged captivity further.

Bids on Parking Space For U.S. Workers Asked

The office of public buildings and public parks is asking for bids on parking concessions for use of Government workers because of the scarcity of parking space, Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director, announced yesterday. The bids will be opened May 20.

Two tracts of Government land have been designated for the parking concessions. One is the site of the old Federal Trade Commission building which burned, while the other, between Ohio avenue, C and Thirteenth streets, formerly was occupied by Bethany Chapel.

SCENE I.—AN AMERICAN HOME.

Talk:

FATHER (as there is a knock on the door)—I wonder who that is?

Mother—What day is it?

Father—Tuesday.

Mother—Then I know who it is: it's the collector.

Father—Icebox?

Mother—No; the icebox installment man came yesterday.

Father—Automobile?

Mother—No; we don't have to make another payment on that until Saturday.

Father—Washing machine?

Mother—That isn't due until tomorrow.

Father—Vacuum cleaner? Piano? Harvard Classics?

Mother—No. You're not even warm. Thaddeus. If you'd only think hard you'd know very well what comes due today.

Father—Those new rugs?

* * * *

MOTHER—No. Now, what was it that we got five months ago, dear? What was it that brought us so much happiness?

Father—Oh, the radio!

Mother — No, Thaddeus. You're frightfully stupid. The baby!

Father—Omigosh! Is another payment due on him already?

Mother—Today's the day.

Father—I thought we had him all paid up by this time.

Mother—Well, we haven't, dear.

Father—It seems like an awfully long time.

(He answers the knock and the collector comes in.)

Collector—How do you do? I'm the installment man for Gladys.

Father—For whom?

Collector—Gladys.

Mother—There must be some mistake. We have no Gladys.

Collector (shuffling his papers—Oh, my mistake; Gladys is the baby upstairs . . . Two more payments on her. . . . Yours is Herman

Father—Henry.

* * * *

COLLECTOR—That's right. . . Herman's the one I just collected for in the next block. . . Final payment, too.

Father—How much more do we owe you on Henry?

Collector—Lemme see. . . You paid $10 down. . . Was yours a stock baby or a de luxe model with special equipment?

Mother—We took the regular model.

Collector—Well, you have three more payments to meet.

Father (figuring)—He'll be all paid for in August, then?

Collector—In August, sir; yes, sir.

* * * *

SCENE II. The same Late August.

Father (bursting into the room in high spirits and waving a receipt)—Well, dear; it's all settled.

Mother—You mean you went into the office and made the last payment on the baby?

Father (embracing her)—Yep. NOW WE OWN HIM OUTRIGHT!

A BREAK FOR ROYALTY.

AS HE reads the returns, play by play, from Spain King Alfonso must realize by this time that he didn't get such a bad break after all.

President Hoover, it is announced, holds the record among American Presidents for appearances before the microphone. He has talked over the radio 50 times since he took office. Among the former Presidents completely outdistanced in this respect is Abraham Lincoln.

Col. Amos W. W. Woodcock, grand poobah of the prohibition forces, announces the appointment of a commission of college professors to investigate prohibition. This confirms the suspicion that what the Wickersham commission always needed was a second eleven.

Car Owner Victim In Police Hunt

Lawrence Serrin Grows Weary of Defending His Motor in Court.

Lawrence F. Serrin would like to have it thoroughly understood his automobile is not a stolen car. Four times in the past 48 hours he has been stopped by policemen on suspicion of having a stolen automobile in his possession. Each time he had to persuade the policemen that he owned the car.

Thursday he was halted at Connecticut avenue and Brandywine street, and went to the Fourteenth Precinct, to convince the police that he was driving his own automobile.

He was stopped again on Fourteenth street, again on Rhode Island avenue northeast, and a third time on Seventh street northwest.

The reason is that in reporting the theft of an automobile over the teletype machines in the precincts, a typographical error was made. Instead of K-232, the report carried K-232. Mr. Serrin lives at 1617 Riggs place northwest.

A. U. Dramatic Club's Play Well Received

Before a large and appreciative audience the American University Dramatic Club presented Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" last night at the gymnasium auditorium.

Under direction of Will Hutchins, professor of art, the play was presented in Elizabethan fashion, with elaborate costuming, only one scene, and without the use of the curtain except for the end. James Elmer Swan, as Romeo, and Helen Tucker, as Juliet, were well received in the title roles, while the best work among the large supporting cast was seen in Leonel Dick, as Mercutio; Arthur Murphy, as Benvolio; Beatrice Adams, as nurse to Juliet, and John Houston, as Peter, a servant. Student stage manager for the show was Jane Lytle, while the business manager was Orrel Belle Claflin.
